'Massive' Force of B-29s Hits Nagoya

First Army Surge Seizes 11 Miles of Rhine's East Bank

Export Gate Established To Protect U. S. Supply

Committee Set Up To Funnel Food, Material Demands Of Army, Agencies

In a move designed to guard America's rapidly dwindling domestic supplies of food and raw materials, War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes yesterday set up an interagency committee on foreign shipments to regulate all exports out of a strictly military nature.

Leo Crowley, foreign economics administrator, was named chairman of the new committee. Serving under him will be representatives of the State, War and Navy Departments, War Shipping Administration, War Production Board and War Food Administration.

Byrnes' action followed disclosures only 24 hours before of troubles on the Nation's food and production fronts which threaten the war effort at home.

All Commitments Controlled

"It is to be understood," said Byrnes in a letter to Crowley, made public at the White House, "that no agency of the Government may enter into formal or informal commitments for the export of supplies other than for essential military purposes such as direct lend-lease and supplies in the wake of battle, to foreign countries, without first receiving the approval of this committee."

Private exports already were under control, requiring FEA authorization. On the committee, besides Crowley, will be Will L. Clayton, Assistant Secretary, State Department; Capt. G. Conway, War Shipping Administration; Lieut. Gen. Breghon Somervell, War Department; Judge Marvin Jones, War Food Administration; Capt. L. H. Strauss, Navy Department.

Byrnes said the committee was formed after a conference with the interested agencies, held Friday, to study all of the factors relevant to the "capabilities of the United States to export items for the support of the war other than direct military commitments."

"An investigation of the conditions confronting our own inland transport as well as shipping and related factors had developed the need for this conference," Byrnes said in a statement accompanying his letter.

It had already become known that the War Food Administration See EXPORTS, Page 2, Column 7.

Senate Favors Oaks Outline, Checkup Shows

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

A quiet checkup has convinced Administration lieutenants that as of today fewer than 20 votes would be cast in the Senate against a world security treaty patterned on Dumbarton Oaks principles.

Avoiding formal polls, Administration supporters have been busy since the Yalta conference sounding out sentiment, particularly among the newer members. They have known pretty well for some time what most of the veterans think about plans for a world peace treaty, if that method becomes necessary.

Sources which cannot be identified publicly at present say that as the situation now stands it seems doubtful more than a half-dozen Democrats and twice as many minority members can be counted in opposition to the fundamental doctrine laid down at Dumbarton Oaks. They concede there may be arguments about details, protests about methods and criticism of personalities. But it is their contention See TREATY, Page 2, Column 5.

Women Told To Watch Out For Medley

Accused Boyer Killer Preys on Females, Police Chief Warns

Women were warned last night to be on the alert for Joseph Medley, smooth, poker-playing escaped convict, as the Federal Bureau of Investigation intensified its Nation-wide hunt for the accused slayer of Mrs. Nancy Boyer.

The warning was voiced by Maj. Edward Kelly, Metropolitan police chief, who said: "I would like to see Medley's picture on every front page in the country, to protect the women who are his special victims. He is dangerous, and should be reported to the police or FBI the moment he is seen."

DESCRIPTION ISSUED: FBI circulars describe the fugitive, who is wanted in the murders of three women, as 44, but much older looking, with heavy dark hair streaked with gray, parted on the left and combed straight back. His eyes are grayish-blue and "piercing." He has a sharp, prominent nose, heavy eyebrows, clean-shaven face, is of medium build and has upper and lower plates.

Although considerable activity centered about the case at local police headquarters yesterday, neither Major Kelly nor Detective Inspector Robert J. Barrett would indicate whether additional local clues have been unearthed since the recovery earlier of jewelry and furs pawned here by the former Chicagoan.

None Mrs. Boyer's Barrett stated flatly that none of the articles recovered belonged to Mrs. Boyer, the 50-year-old divorcee whose body, shot in the rear Washington House apartment at 2120 16th st. nw. Still unaccounted for are a valuable fur coat and diamond and emerald ring missing from her apartment.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Boyer's body is at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home, 2801 14th st. nw. Her daughter, Mrs. Dolores Boyer Mitchell, who came here Friday from Cambridge, Mass., with her Navy officer husband, refused to make public details of the funeral.

Washington police hold strongly to the theory that Medley, who used the alias "Larry Fischer" in his poker-playing sojourn here, may have been connected with the double murder on February 23 of Edward F. Barker See MURDER, Page 2, Column 2.

Legal Election Promised

Not Candidate for Presidency, Vargas of Brazil Announces

Rio de Janeiro, March 11 (AP).—President Getulio Vargas announced today he would not be a candidate in Brazil's forthcoming election—the first to be held since he became head of the government in 1930.

Speaking to newsmen at a testimonial luncheon, Vargas declared: "I ask nothing for myself. I am not a candidate."

Patton Gains 18 Miles on Moselle, Takes 22 Towns To Threaten Saar

Paris, March 11 (AP).—U. S. First Army troops and tanks expanded their Remagen bridgehead more than a mile south today, and the Germans said the Americans had seized 11 miles of the Rhine's east bank after spanning the river with numerous pontoon bridges.

American artillery was blazing away on the far side in close support of the infantry as the push began gathering momentum after overrunning eight east bank towns.

The Germans were being beaten back from artillery range of the bridgehead's lifeline, the Ludendorff bridge. Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead reported from the front that enemy fire, intense yesterday and last night, had begun to slacken.

CLAIM 5-MILE SPURT: In the first estimate of the size of the bridgehead, Whitehead put it at 3 miles deep and 9 miles wide, with the towns of Erpel, Linz, Rheinbreitbach, Unkel, Bruchhausen, Ohlenberg and Dalteng in American hands.

The Germans said the bridgehead was four miles deep and 11 miles wide, and declared the Americans had made a sudden five-mile spurt southward.

Eleven miles to the north, enemy reports said the Americans had been driven from half of Honnet, but then Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges, "supported by a strong air umbrella," was attempting to break out of the encircling ring.

Whitehead said in the four days since the Americans first crossed the Rhine, many thousands of troops had entered the bridgehead along with armor, artillery and mobile tank destroyers in a push that the Germans had been unable to check.

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK: It was the story of the Normandy beachhead all over again, he said. Once across, the First Army rapidly built up reserve strength and now it was lashing out, driving the enemy steadily out of range of the landing.

Germany's Rhine line was imperiled on a 150-mile front, as the Canadian First and U. S. Ninth armies crushed the last enemy pocket at Wesel. Powerful preparations for a new crossing were in progress behind a dense smoke screen extending 40 miles westward from Wesel.

The U. S. Third Army on the south took a 15-mile grip on the Rhine extending to within a mile of Coblenz, and waved a threat over the last enemy holdings west of the Rhine in the Saar and the Palatinate by capturing 18 miles of the Moselle River's north bank in a See WAR, Page 2, Column 5.

Army Officers Arrested in Revolt Plot in Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, March 11 (AP).—A plot to overthrow the government of President Luperon Pumarejo on the eve of Saturday's elections has been smashed with the arrest of more than 50 persons, it was announced today.

Several persons were arrested here, including retired army officers, and the announcement stated, a cache of over 800 bombs was found in the Apostolic College Cathedral and another of 400 bombs was discovered near the presidential palace.

Among those arrested were Col. Tiborio Reyes, Archilla and Manuel Agudelo, a clergyman named Duarte and several Christian Brothers, it was announced.

He would not abandon his post "either through violence or aggression" and would turn over the office "to my legally chosen successor."

"I shall not deceive the people of Brazil," he added.

Vargas announced March 1 that he would fix within 90 days the date for a general election and See BRAZIL, Page 7, Column 1.

10-Mile Smash By Reds Perils Danzig, Gdynia

London, March 11 (AP).—A 10-mile eastward advance brought Soviet forces within 8 miles of the Bay of Danzig today in their drive to split the German defenders of Danzig and Poland's great prewar port of Gdynia.

The Second White Russian Army, advancing from the west, captured Koelln, 12 miles northwest of Danzig and 9 miles southwest of Gdynia, the Soviet communique announced.

Gains southeast of Danzig also were reported. Soviet forces pushing northward along the eastern bank of the Vistula River captured Liessau, 19 miles southeast of the imperiled city.

Moscow was silent regarding operations at besieged Stettin, the Baltic port northeast of Berlin, where fierce fighting is in progress, according to German accounts, but it announced another push north to the Baltic coast, which topped the town of Leba, 16 miles northwest of captured Lasenburg.

The communique also reported that Marshal Zhukov's First White Russian troops were fighting the trapped enemy garrison in the eastern part of Kolberg, near where See RUSSIA, Page 2, Column 3.

Calls for New Order

Community Welfare Is Above Labor, Capital, Pope Declares

Vatican City, March 11 (AP).—Pope Pius XII declared today the time had come to contemplate a "new order of productive forces of the people" wherein the welfare of the community is placed above that of labor or capital.

The Pontiff, in an audience given members of the Catholic Workers' organizations meeting here, said capital-labor accords which were confined merely to an agreement between the two parties were not a "stable principle of social order" because they might lead to exploration either of labor or of capital.

The Pope said socialization was justified only when the "common welfare" really required it as an only means to repair the abused or avoid the waste of a nation's productive forces. Even then, he added, just socialization requires

Fight to End, Hitler Commands; Situation Very Serious—Koiso

Premier Warns Japs 'Sacred Homeland' May Be Battlefield

By the Associated Press
Premier Kuniaki Koiso, addressing the imperial diet Sunday, warned the Japanese they must prepare for the time when their "sacred motherland" will become a battlefield.

The remarks were reported by the Japanese Domei agency in a radio broadcast recorded by the FCC.

Declaring "the present war situation is very serious," Koiso called upon the Japanese people to renew their confidence in "sure victory" and to prepare to fight in "defense of the national structure and the sacred motherland, whatever hardships may be in store for them."

Vague on Invasion
Speaking of the situation in French Indo-China, where Japanese moved to take complete control of the colony last week, Koiso said the military situation had "become so intensified that a full-scale invasion of the region may be expected at any minute."

The report did not make clear whether Koiso meant he thought See JAPS, Page 2, Column 4.

Germany's Only Hope Seen in Battling Until Allies Split

London, March 11 (AP).—Adolf Hitler made another urgent appeal to his armies today to fight fanatically to the bitter end despite all reverses, meanwhile crushing defeatists within their ranks.

Speaking on the tenth anniversary of the day when he reintroduced general conscription in Germany in violation of the Versailles Treaty and started his country on the road to war, Hitler attempted to spotlight Russia as Germany's No. 1 enemy, an enemy bent on annihilating "our Continent." In a "Heroes Day" proclamation Hitler said with unusual frankness that Germany's hope was in fighting until the Allies tired and split.

As German radios broadcast Hitler's proclamation, rumors circulated in Switzerland that he had called his rubber stamp Nazi Reichstag into session. Such a summons would be an implicit admission of the growing desperation of Germany's situation.

Unable to Handle Wounded
Moscow radio quoted reports the Nazis were unable to handle the stream of wounded arriving in Austria because hospitals lacked food, bedding and medicines. It said also Hitler was expected to decorate Heinrich Himmler, his homefront dictator, for "his alleged successes as supreme commander on the Russian front," and many German army officers were resentful.

Hitler said: "It is my unalterable decision and it has to be the inexorable determination of all of us not to give a worse example to posterity than our forefathers gave to us. Therefore, there will be no repetition See HITLER, Page 2, Column 1.

Americans Land on Mindanao In Philippines; Japs Off Guard

New York, March 11 (AP).—American troops have landed at Zamboanga on Mindanao, in the Philippines, CBS Correspondent John Adams reported in a broadcast from the Philippines at 6:22 p. m. EWT today.

Adams reported in his broadcast that General MacArthur announced in a communique that the American forces landed on the beach at Zamboanga on the southwest-

Split Iwo Japs Showing Signs Of Breakdown

Guam, March 11 (AP).—Dispatches from the Iwo Jima front reported signs of disorganization among the Japanese, who were cut into three pockets on the north tip of the island where three Marine divisions today were striving for the kill. It was the twenty-first day of the bitterly waged campaign.

Morris Landsberg, Associated Press correspondent at Iwo, said the Nipponese appeared to be milling about in disorganized groups under hammering by the Fourth Marine Division on the right flank.

Fourth Makes Gains
Admiral Chester W. Nimitz Sunday communique credited the Fourth, whose front had lagged behind the Third in the center and the Fifth on the left, with substantial gains Saturday afternoon, which carried up to Tachilwa Point, easternmost area on Iwo.

Nimitz said Japanese resistance, which repeatedly had been characterized as heavy up until Friday afternoon, was "decreasing at numerous points." Landsberg's dispatch spoke of light resistance to the Fourth's advances "indicating that the Japanese fight has played out somewhat."

Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Fourth Marine Division by Friday night had compressed one group of the enemy into a pocket extending 300 yards inland from a 1200-yard stretch of the east coast.

Farther north, a smaller pocket, 200 yards along the shore and 500 yards inland, was being surrounded by the Fourth and others of the Third Division. Erskine's Third Division, Erskine's men by Friday night had controlled 1400 yards of the north-east shoreline.

A third enemy pocket of about a half mile square around Kitano Point, northernmost spot on Iwo, confronted other Marines under Erskine and the Fifth Division of Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey.

Apparently the enemy was caught off guard. The naval and air bombardment was extensive. The American troops were advancing toward an airfield. They also are advancing toward the city of Zamboanga.

Incendiaries Showered On Congested 5-Mile Area

15 Square Miles Of Tokyo Burned After Huge Raid By 300 Planes

Twenty-first U. S. Bomber Command Headquarters, Guam (Monday), March 12 (via Navy Radio) (AP). Striking while Tokyo still nursed burning wounds of a heavy Superfort attack only 48 hours before, a massive force of approximately 300 B-29s loosed 2000 tons of incendiary bombs on Nagoya—Japan's third largest city and most important aircraft center—in the early morning darkness today.

The incendiaries fell over a congested 5-square-mile area in the center of the city of 1,328,000 inhabitants as the mammoth planes bombed from the sensationally low altitude of 5000 feet.

Headquarters revealed today that Saturday's Tokyo strike, which employed 2300 tons of bombs and left 15 square miles of the city in flames, was the first time the Superforts had bombed at the 5000 level. The planes are designed for high-altitude work.

Only Two Planes Lost
Daring of the venture may have contributed to the baffling of the enemy's defenses. In the Tokyo raid only two planes were lost over the target, probably to flak.

Today's Nagoya strike was the fastest follow-up major attack on the Japanese empire yet staged by the Superforts.

Ground crews began readying most of the planes for this mission immediately after they returned from Tokyo. About two-thirds of the Tokyo attack crews made the same 3000-mile round trip to hit Nagoya, which lies 165 miles west-southwest of the capital.

At least seven big fires still blazed in the heart of Tokyo at 11:30 a. m. Sunday (Japan time) following the Superforts' pre-dawn Saturday visit, reconnaissance disclosed.

The Nagoya target area is dominated by aircraft industries but also produces important railway equipment, machine tools, bearings, tanks, motor vehicles and processed foods.

Promises Total Destruction
The city, lying at the head of foot-shaped Ise Bay, has an important port. It is not, however, the best of the harbors on Honshu Island.

Through disruption of rail traffic the incendiary attack is expected to have an immediate effect on aircraft production and other industries, and to affect other vital war activities.

Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, commanding the Twenty-first Bomber Command, commented on the increasing number of Superforts in recent attacks on Japan and promised that the rise in numbers would continue.

"All the Japs have to look forward to is total destruction of their industries, cities and other vital targets devoted to their war effort," LeMay said.

Today's strike was the eighth attack on Nagoya.

Early in January bomber command headquarters said previous See FORTS, Page 2, Column 5.

Shots Ring Out At Ecuador's Assembly Session

Quito, Ecuador, March 11 (AP).—In a stormy session during which shots were fired in the spectators' galleries, Ecuador's constitutional assembly today granted President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra the power to grant amnesty to certain political prisoners.

The convention adjourned at 3 a. m. after police dispersed 300 persons who milled around the assembly hall. No one was injured by the shots fired during the debate.

Allied Raiders Hit Berlin, Essen, Ports

War Sidelines Pinups Ruin Perspective, Veteran Says

Hollywood, March 11 (AP)—Louis Hayward realizes that it may sound treasonous to Hollywood and the services alike, but he doubts the morale value of pin-up pictures.

"For one thing," the actor remarked on the "Run Little Indians" set, "the pin-up is the only feminine companion a man has. Out there you can believe anything, and after a while a man comes to believe that all women are like his pin-up girl."

"Imagine this disappointment when he comes home to discover that his wife or sweetheart does not measure up to his ideal."

"Pin-up photographs are bad enough, but the Petty and Varga girls are worse. Women simply aren't constructed like that. The men return and are frustrated when they fail to find women with such long legs."

It's possible that Hayward's distaste for the pin-ups dates back to the days when he was a Marine captain. He was discharged recently after more than two years of service, including action at Tarawa.

Troop Leaders Banded

With the U. S. Ninth Army, Germany, March 11 (AP)—Command officers of the U. S. Army now are authorized to wear a narrow green band beneath their shoulder insignia.

One of the first to attract attention to the new insignia was Lieut. Gen. William H. Simpson, commander of the U. S. Ninth Army, who recently was photographed with the band on his shoulder. The band is authorized for commissioned officers of all ranks who actually command troops, to distinguish them from officers who operate only in an executive capacity.

British Reporter Killed

London, March 11 (AP)—Peter Lawless, war correspondent for the London Daily Telegraph with the U. S. First Army, has been killed on the Western Front, it was announced here tonight.

Walter Farr of the London Daily Mail and William Troughton of the London Daily Express, who were with Lawless, were injured slightly. Lawless was fatally wounded Saturday when he crossed the Rhine to the Remagen bridgehead.

Submarine Plants At Kiel, Bremen, Hamburg Blasted

London (Monday), March 12 (AP)—Speedy RAF Mosquitoes stung Berlin last night for the twentieth consecutive night in the round-the-clock battering of the Reich, dumping 4000-pound blockbusters into the already ravaged capital.

The night assault followed a two-pronged daylight blow yesterday in which more than 1000 RAF bombers hurled 5000 tons of explosives on Essen, war-plant city just ahead of the U. S. Ninth Army, and 1200 American bombers attacked submarine plants at Kiel, Bremen and Hamburg.

The American daylight raiders dumped 3500 tons of bombs on the three ports in one of the war's greatest blows against the German U-boat building program.

Fly Without Loss

Then the RAF daylight force, largest in recent weeks, sent destruction shuddering through Essen, home of the Krupp arms works and a key railway and communications center in the Ruhr. RAF losses were not disclosed immediately.

While the Heavies mauled Essen and the submarine centers, the Ninth United States Air Force ranged over Germany, stabbing at communications and supplies. Fighter bombers flew 579 and medium bombers 680 sorties without loss.

The mediums hit two ammunition dumps in the Ruhr, raked four airfields near Giessen and attacked enemy communications. No enemy aircraft was sighted by the Ninth's force as the Fighter bombers provided continuous air cover for the bridgehead over the Rhine at Remagen.

Crossing At Essen Hinted Essen, within range of United States Army heavy artillery along the Rhine in the Duisburg area, is less than 15 miles from the river. Front dispatches have hinted the Allies soon might attempt a Rhine crossing in this area.

Week at Camp Lee To Close Course

Camp Lee, Va., March 11 (AP)—The final phase of an eight-week course in management and operations of Army service forces training centers for high-ranking officers will begin here tomorrow. Sixty-one officers, drawn from the Army's seven major technical services, a majority overseas veterans, comprise the group completing the course.

"To everything with dogged resolution . . . to bring about the turn of the tide. We must be no less fanatical in annihilating all those who are trying to destroy this command. . . God who created this world helps only those who are determined to help themselves."

(The BBC, heard in New York, reported a German broadcast saying only a few Berliners went to the ceremony and that "the expression on their faces was deeply serious.")

Test of Hitler's Order

London, March 11 (AP)—The text of Adolf Hitler's order, as broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press:

Soldiers: In the peace treaty of Versailles the same enemies we have to fight now forced us to disarm completely and to keep a ridiculously small professional army instead of the armed forces of the people.

We received the solemn promise that the first step of a general disarmament. It was only a swindle and trickery. The moment Germany had definitely laid down her arms the time for blackmail and looting began.

The peace treaty ordered the dismemberment of Germany. Our enemies armed as never before. Screened before the eyes of the outer world, this state had built up a gigantic armed force with the outposts arm suddenly to attack Europe, which was made powerless by the Jews.

Charles Reds Held Peril You, my soldiers fighting in the east, know the extent of this rearmament. Had Germany remained in a state of military impotence, all Europe already would have fallen now to bolshevism—a war of extermination against the peoples of Europe would have been in progress for years.

Recognizing the danger facing the future of our continent, I gave orders to make Germany fit to face the moment I took over, so that we had no longer to face a light-hearted attack. It happened, however, only after I had made numerous offers for a general disarmament, for liberation of the air force, for eliminating a war of bombing, to eliminate heavy artillery and tanks, to limit the number of troops to a minimum and so on, and all of the proposals were turned down by our enemies.

Says Vell Now Drawn Back This refusal of our enemies showed at the same time their brutal intentions. Ten years have passed since the days in March, 1933, when Germany introduced compulsory military service.

This feat gained Germany the means necessary for her self-defense, without which there would be no Germany by now. The Jewish alliance between capitalism and bolshevism which threatens Europe today has in the meantime drawn the veil from the armaments to destroy our continent.

In spite of this the German Reich, betrayed by most of her allies, has carried on the war for six long years. Germany has achieved successes of unique greatness. Even if fate has turned against us now, there can be no doubt that these reverses can be overcome as so often before, with steadfastness, and courage, and without fanaticism.

Recalls "Seven Years' War" There is no great state which in its history did not go through the same ordeal. . . . The second war against the Carthaginians, Romans, was being crossed from east to west by a column of Marshal Constantine Rokossovsky's forces which last was reported by Moscow dispatches 10 miles from Danzig. It seemed likely that Rokossovsky would capture the mouth of the Vistula within a day or two.

Rokossovsky pushed on west and northwest of Danzig and promised to cut through quickly to the coast between it and Poland's prewar port of Gdynia.

In its larger aspects, the joint offensive by Zhukov and Rokossovsky appeared to have virtually concluded its prime aim of crushing the German army east of the Oder.

Von Hammer reported a new battle had started south of the upper Silesian industrial area as the Russians resumed attacks in the direction of the Moravian gap.

"The Germans expected the Silesian attack," he asserted, "and, according to reports so far available, the Russians were thrown back at all ports with great losses."

The Germans claimed continued success in counterattacks against Marshal Ivan S. Konev's and Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's armies in Silesia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

Moscow said Soviet troops had repulsed attacks by large forces of German armor and infantry north-east and east of Lake Balaton and claimed 153 enemy tanks were knocked out Saturday in that area by artillery and mines.

1600 prisoners were taken Saturday.

Broadcasts from Berlin indicated the Eastern Front from Danzig and Stettin southward to Hungary was flaring with desperate army, SS (Elite Guard) and Volksturm attempts to check the Russian advances.

The Germans, contesting every yard of soil, fell back to Danzig, Gdynia and into Stettin, defending each suburb and outlying stronghold.

On the eastern outskirts of Stettin, the Germans were braced with additional reserves, tanks and artillery in an attempt to prevent a cave-in of the "Oder wall" north of Berlin.

This political and industrial capital of Pomerania was wreathed in smoke from Alt Damm, Finkenwalde and Podeljuch.

Heavy Russian batteries installed on wooded hills overlooking Stettin from the southeast laid down barrages of fire on four bridges across the Oder inside the city.

Upstream and downstream from Stettin, Marshal Zhukov proved for bridgeheads on the river's west bank from which to launch a pincer movement on the city from the rear. It seemed unlikely that Zhukov would try to break into Stettin by a frontal assault until its encirclement was assured. The city itself was a relatively unimportant prize compared with Berlin.

Col. Ernst von Hammer, Nazi military commentator, claimed in a broadcast today that the Germans had repulsed Russian attacks between Frankfurt and Kuesstrin due east of Berlin, although he admitted street fighting raged in Kuesstrin as the Red army strove to knock out that bar on the road to Berlin.

German reports also acknowledged the Nazi withdrawal toward the Bay of Danzig in the Polish Corridor, but insisted the Russians had been unsuccessful in splitting the German front.

Von Hammer said strong Russian tank spearheads were hammering between Kartuz (Kartus) and Zuckau, as well as between the Vistula and Nogat Rivers, and claimed 59 Red Army tanks had been knocked out.

The wide delta of the Vistula, thickly veined with irrigation canals, was being crossed from east to west by a column of Marshal Constantine Rokossovsky's forces which last was reported by Moscow dispatches 10 miles from Danzig. It seemed likely that Rokossovsky would capture the mouth of the Vistula within a day or two.

Rokossovsky pushed on west and northwest of Danzig and promised to cut through quickly to the coast between it and Poland's prewar port of Gdynia.

In its larger aspects, the joint offensive by Zhukov and Rokossovsky appeared to have virtually concluded its prime aim of crushing the German army east of the Oder.

an Allied landing there was imminent, or whether he referred to possible additional Japanese operations in that area.

He spoke of "reckless enemy advances" in the Philippines and on two Jima and said American air raids by Superfortresses and carrier-based planes on the Japanese homeland had reached "serious proportions." But, he added, his government would speedily adopt "bold measures" to meet the situation.

"Judging from past enemy strategy of reckless advance on the basis of material superiority," he said, "the enemy may in the near future start a blind direct advance to our mainland in his desperate effort to end the war as soon as possible." An invasion of Japan proper, he said would be "the God-sent opportunity for the decisive battle. . . ."

Sees Enemy Crushed "If the enemy should invade waters near our mainland we will crush him on the sea. If he should attempt to land we will intercept him at the water's edge and drive him back into the sea. If he should finally succeed in landing we will annihilate him with sledgehammer blows."

"Geographical advantage will be on our side because the battle will be fought on our home ground. There will be solid unity among us. . . ."

"What is more, we can count upon the brilliant strategy of our high command and the grim determination of our officers and men to defend the country to the last. . . . I am more than confident that we will never allow the enemy to stay on our sacred motherland alive."

Koiso's pledge of "bold measures" to meet the critical war situation was seconded by War Minister Gen. Sugiyama and Navy Minister Mitsumasa Yonai.

Chance for Suicide Pilots Sugiyama told the diet an attempt to invade the Japanese homeland would be a "God-given opportunity" for Nippon suicide airmen: "and new weapons" to send enemy warships and transports "to the bottom of the sea."

In event of an actual landing, he added, "we have a sure program of destroying them all."

The war minister spoke of the "distinguished leadership" of Gen. Tomiyuki Yamashita, Japanese commander in the Philippines, and Lieut. Gen. Tadamichi Kuribayashi, commander on Iwo Jima. He said the fights there were delaying actions and that Japanese "bleeding" tactics have already cost the Americans 70,000 casualties on Luzon and 20,000 on Iwo.

Sugiyama read this message from his two commanders: "Despite the gallant fighting put up by my men, a part of the island has been lost to the enemy for which I am filled with great trepidation, especially when I think of the future of our sovereign and our country, and if this airbase, so close to our capital, should be lost to the enemy, I feel my heart bursting."

Navy Head Confident

In a message to the House of Representatives the two general staffs said the battle there was "becoming more and more grim and sanguinary" but pledged his garrison "to crush the enemy."

Admiral Yonai told the Diet "it was regrettable" that no serious losses could be inflicted upon the United States Fleet task force which recently sent carrier planes to raid Tokyo.

The minister expressed the navy's confidence in its ability to "intercept and wipe out the enemy task forces on the sea when the opportunity presents itself, in close collaboration with the army."

surge that swept over 22 German towns.

Berlin radio said American forces in a surprise attack from the Remagen bridgehead overran at least three east bank Rhineland towns, struck six miles southeast of Remagen and stormed into the center of Hoenningen.

Engineers Span Rhine

A German front correspondent reported that Hodges' Engineers had succeeded in throwing "a number of emergency bridges" across the Rhine in the Remagen area despite bombing and artillery fire.

"Almost all units of the United States First Army are either wholly or in considerable part concentrated in this area," one enemy account said.

American fighter-bombers flew protective cover over the bridgehead, and attacked highway centers beyond it, striving to keep the enemy from marshaling enough reinforcements to seal it off.

In concert with the Third Army, the First was constricting the lines around the large German force cut off to the southwest in the Eifel Mountains. This force was believed still to number 23,000 after large blocks of it had been rounded up.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army in its southward lunge seemed headed for bigger stakes, the capture of the Rich Saar steel and coal basin and the Palatinate of Bavaria, both now by enemy account being emptied of women, children and those too feeble to fight.

Would Be Severe Blow

With the factories of the Ruhr already under U. S. Ninth Army artillery fire, the loss of the Saar would be a blow to the enemy, and the stoutness of his defense on its northward approaches in the Moselle Valley and on the south against the U. S. Seventh Army testifies to his concern.

By capturing 18 miles of the Moselle's west bank, stretching from within a mile west of Coblenz southwestward to captured Carden, Patton was in position to cut in behind these defenses by forging across the broad Moselle River.

Patton still had opened no attack on Coblenz, a city of 80,000 protected on the west and north by the Moselle's confluence with the Rhine. It was being shelled, however, and had lost much of its tactical importance because its bridges were destroyed.

Nazi's Hold Is Slipping Other Third Army forces were methodically mopping up the north bank of the Moselle from the Trier area, and driving north into the Eifel trap. The Germans still held possibly 35 miles of the Moselle's north bank but their hold was slipping.

With the United States Ninth Army, Canadian and British forces stamped out the Germans' last west bank stand on the Rhine opposite Wesel last night, capturing 600 of the enemy's rear guards.

When the Ninth Army cleared the last pocket of resistance at Fort Blum, opposite Wesel, there was not a German west of the Rhine from Bonn northward to the sea.

From all indications, the Germans managed to evacuate most of their forces from the Wesel pocket in good condition, a front dispatch said.

The German High Command was shifting its troops, artillery and tanks along the east bank of the Rhine to meet the next blow, which enemy broadcasts insist will be the main one and will aim for the north German plain on the high road to Berlin.

Winchester Area Joint Slaughtering Plant Considered

Winchester, Va., March 11 (AP)—Livestock interests in northern Virginia and eastern West Virginia have under consideration plans for erecting a slaughtering plant here at an estimated cost of $500,000, according to Fred Stone, Frederick County farm appraiser, who would be operated on a cooperative basis.

A meeting was held recently at New Market at which time county committees were appointed to make survey of the possibilities of such an establishment. Boyd V. Unger, county committee chairman, said he had collected data showing production in Frederick, Clarke, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Augusta, Bath, Highland, Warren and Page Counties.

Other counties proposed for inclusion in the area are Rappahannock, Fauquier and Loudoun, in Virginia, and Hampshire, Hardy, Grant, Pendleton, Morgan, Berkeley and Jefferson in West Virginia.

large in the voting strength of several States.

The Yalta agreement on council voting procedure apparently was favorably received by the majority in the Senate. But its grant of power to the large nations to veto the use of force against any country is likely to be discussed at length.

Text of Byrnes' Order Creating Stiffer Control of War Exports

Following is the text of a statement released at the White House yesterday on the formation of a new export control committee:

Director of War Mobilization and Reconversion James F. Byrnes announced today that with the approval of the President he had established an inter-agency committee on "foreign shipments" under the chairmanship of Mr. Leo Crowley, administrator of the Foreign Economic Administration.

This committee was formed following a conference with the interested Government agencies, held on March 8, 1945, to examine all of the related factors which pertain to the capabilities of the United States to export items for the support of the war other than direct military commitments. An investigation of the conditions confronting our own inland transport as well as shipping and related factors had developed the need for this conference.

It will be the duty of this committee to program American exports in relationship to the requirements of our own civilian economy to make sure that their impact does not reduce our own capabilities to support our war effort and meet our own essential needs.

Text of Letter

The text of Justice Byrnes' letter, which is also to be issued in the form of an order and printed in the Federal register, follows:

March 10, 1945.

Dear Mr. Crowley: Confirming the conference held in my office on March 8, I hereby designate you as chairman of an interagency committee to coordinate foreign shipments. I understand that the agencies, which include the Foreign Economic Administration, War Department, Navy Department, War Production Board, War Shipping Administration, War Food Administration and the Department of State, will be represented on your committee by the same persons who had turned to Byrnes for aid in dividing a declining supply of meat, fats and sugar among military, Lend-Lease, foreign relief and civilian claimants.

Byrnes said it was not his intention that the new committee should take over the duty of allocating materials now held by the various agencies for the War Production Board, or of the food requirements of the WFA. However, those committees' recommendations will be channeled through the new organization.

Byrnes' announcement of the new committee came as the War Food Administration was confronted with this situation:

The total requirements of the various agencies for the April-June quarter considerably exceed the prospective supplies of these particular food items.

It has been the policy of the WFA to allocate the national food supply figures quarterly on quantities of various foods they expect to need for the coming quarter. The WFA represents lend-lease countries and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. The WFA itself acts as representative for civilians.

On the other hand, UNRRA has been making plans to take over relief feeding in some areas now being supplied by the military, and the Lend-Lease Administration has made moves to help supply France.

All this has resulted in a heavier impact on the American food supplies.

School Fraternities' Future Seen to Lie In Adaptability

Richmond, Va., March 11 (AP)—Dr. Fred H. Turner, president of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, speaking before Richmond members of the fraternity last night, said the future of social fraternities lies largely in the ability of their leaders to adjust activities to the educational programs of colleges and universities.

Reviewing the progress of the fraternity since its founding at Tusculum, Ala., in 1865, Dr. Turner pointed out its membership now totals more than 56,000 men, in 113 chapters, 95 of which have houses.

Officers elected for the fraternity's central Virginia Alumni Association are William A. Ferdue, Richmond, president; Paul W. Richman, vice president; Howard P. Falls, treasurer, and R. P. Murphy, secretary.

To End Strike Today

Danville, Va., March 11 (AP)—Textile operatives of the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills, idle for a week, voted to return to their jobs Monday at a mass meeting attended by more than 1000 strikers here this afternoon.

The "back-to-work" vote followed assurances from the War Labor Board that a new panel will be set up to hear both the union and management sides of what the CIO union terms are "stretch out" and "pay losses" grievances as a result of war changes. The WLB has scheduled a hearing at Washington at 9 a. m. Wednesday.

attended the meeting in my office. These persons are: Assistant Secretary, Mr. Will L. Clayton. War Shipping Administration—Capt. G. Conway.

War Production Board—Mr. J. A. Krug.

War Department—Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell.

War Food Administration—Judge Marvin Jones.

Navy Department—Capt. L. H. Strauss.

I think it highly important that you advise these representatives that they are expected to personally attend committee meetings when they are in town and that they may send alternates only if absent and the alternate is acting in their place during such absence.

Purpose Outlined The purpose of this committee is to examine all of the related factors which pertain to the capabilities of the United States to export items for the support of the war, other than direct military lend-lease commitments. This will include all programs directed to relief, rehabilitation and industrial development.

It is apparent that the shipment of food for relief purposes from the United States must be correlated with the shipment of industrial equipment and raw materials to obtain the best use of shipping and, at the same time, to avoid commitments which will require the use of shipping needed for the war effort.

It is not my intent that this committee should assume the responsibility for allocation of materials now vested in the requirements committee of the War Production Board or in the food requirements committee of the War Food Administration. However, the recommendations from these sources will come before the committee for evaluation and consideration in relation to transportation, our own civilian economy and such other factors as warrant consideration.

The armed services must still retain the responsibility for determining their needs in the wake of battle. However, their requirements for shipping materials for this purpose will be made available to the committee for consideration in connection with other proposed shipments. Of course, any requirements for civilian purposes extending beyond the wake of battle, which are vested in the War Department, are to be placed before the committee.

Unified Program Ordered The committee must develop and maintain a unified national program for aid to other countries with full knowledge of all such obligations accepted to date and of the needs of our own domestic economy. It brings together all of the Government agencies having the requisite information to develop a unified viewpoint.

In developing and maintaining this program, it is of obvious importance that priority of need be established among the several overseas programs. Of course, military requirements must still have first priority, followed by the claims of the military agencies for relief supplies in the wake of battle.

Moreover, the committee should give consideration to the problem involved after the defeat of Germany. It should recommend the extent of aid which will be required after that date. Its recommendations should include any legislative measures which may be required. It must be recognized that aid in occupied enemy countries may be provided under existing law only to the extent required in the wake of battle.

All other requirements for relief, rehabilitation, and other purposes must then be evaluated against our own minimum essential civilian economy. Our foreign commitments must not be allowed to disrupt our own economy to such an extent that its capabilities to meet its own needs as well as the needs of others will be reduced. This must include consideration of our own reconversion needs after the defeat of Germany.

I believe it essential that a chairman of the committee, you establish a central information office, which maintains a complete record of all commitments which either have been made by the United States or are under consideration other than direct military lend-lease.

Consideration must be given immediately to commitments which were made in the past, but which now appear capable of fulfillment only with serious impact on our civilian economy, as it may be necessary to reconsider these commitments.

It is to be understood that no agency of the Government may enter into formal or informal commitments for the export of supplies other than for essential military purposes such as direct military lend-lease aid to foreign countries, without first receiving the approval of this committee.

Sincerely Yours,

JAMES F. BYRNES, Director.

Monkeys Put On Payroll at $22.65 an Hour

Kansas City, March 11 (P)—There's monkey business afoot at the Jackson County courthouse where Vice President Harry S. Truman once held forth as county judge.

Four monkeys, owned by a New Yorker, are to be put on the county payroll at a combined salary of $22.65 an hour.

Skeptical employees shook their heads as Frank Moore, chief engineer, explained the monkeys are trained to operate vacuum cleaners in the dark.

Top floors of the courthouse are heated by air carried through narrow ducts in the walls. The ducts haven't been cleaned for years—that's where the monkeys come in.

One will be put into a vent in the duct. Attached to him will be wire brushes which he'll drag along the duct to a second vent on a lower floor. Returning to the top, the monkey will make a second trip through the duct with a small vacuum cleaner, picking up root and dust loosened by the brushes.

Clinic to Find Jobs Here for Handicapped

An employment clinic, through which war jobs will be sought for men and women with physical defects, will be held today and tomorrow at offices of the D. C. Rehabilitation Service, 402 6th st. n.w., under auspices of the Rehabilitation Service, the branch office of the Fourth United States Civil Service Region and the local office of the U.S.E.S.

Officials point out many vital war jobs here could be filled by handicapped persons who are unaware they can do the work.

At the clinic they will be interviewed and their aptitudes and abilities fitted to the jobs available. A medical officer will see that the handicapped applicant is not placed in a position that will tax his physical condition.

If an immediate placement cannot be made, the District Rehabilitation Service will provide training for a job.

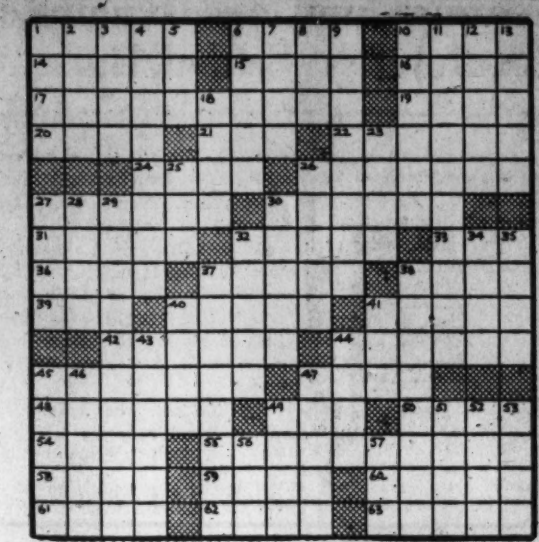

Application can be made at 402 6th st. n.w., or at the offices of the Civil Service Region, 462 Indiana ave. n.w., or the War Manpower Commission, 815 Connecticut ave. n.w.

Red Cross to Open Men's Class Today

A first aid class for men will open today at 7:30 p. m. at the fire house on Windsor avenue in Alexandria, Mrs. L. Ray Torpy, Red Cross first aid chairman, announced yesterday. The 20-hour course will be followed by an advanced course of 10 hours.

Julian Whitestone and L. W. Devers will serve as instructors. The class will meet this week on Monday, Tuesday and Friday nights. Mrs. Torpy also announced the beginning of a junior first aid course on Friday from 7 to 9 p. m. at the South Washington Street Methodist Church. Loren F. Shumway, vice chairman of first aid, will instruct the class.

Report Due Today on Drive By Red Cross

Additional progress toward the $2,700,000 Red Cross goal for the Washington Metropolitan area will be reported today by nine campaign divisions at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The Government division will report results of solicitations tomorrow at a luncheon meeting. At the last report meeting, the overall total for the drive stood at $7,498 gifts for a total of $602,062 or 22.29 per cent of the goal.

Today's program will include music by the United States Coast Guard Band of Curtis Bay, Md. Several entertainers appearing at local restaurants and the Rockettes of the Earle Theater also will take part on the program.

Announcement was made yesterday that 3000 volunteer Red Cross solicitors will be honor guests at a program of the Quiz Kids to be given next Sunday at 7 p. m. at Constitution Hall. Tickets are being allocated to campaign division heads and will be distributed to workers by their division or department chairmen.

Labor Shortage Delays Baltimore Ship Conversion

Baltimore, March 11 (P)—A shortage of trained workers threatens to hold up conversion of Liberty ships and LSTs into vitally needed Navy repair craft at the Maryland Drydock Co.'s two shipyards here, a company spokesman announced yesterday.

The spokesman said at least 228 ne wemplyes are needed to man reconversion gangs properly. Especially needed are electricians, pipefitters, welders, outside machinists, sheetmetal workers and steel workers.

The company is recovering large numbers of vessels into general repair craft, repair vessels used to fix battle damage and motor torpedo-boat tenders used to keep PT boats in action.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and president of the Federation of Churches, has received a call to Cleveland's First Methodist Church, one of that city's largest and most historic churches, he disclosed last night.

But while he plans to leave for the Ohio city in a few days to confer with church officials, as a matter of courtesy, the minister told The Post that he will "undoubtedly decline the call."

In his sermon yesterday morning, Dr. Rustin hinted that he had received the pulpit call, but didn't go into details. Mount Vernon Church, at 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. n.w., and Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. n.w.,

Bruce Barton, noted author and Metropolitan Policyholder.

A policyholder reports on his life insurance company

THIS YEAR, in making its Annual Report to 31,000,000 policyholders, Metropolitan decided to try something new.

We asked Bruce Barton, a policyholder, and a well known writer, if he would write the report. He agreed.

So he visited our Home Office, asked a host of questions, looked into the facts and figures. According to his report, the things he learned about the Company confirm what the Examiners of the State Insurance Department found. Following their most recent official examination of the Company they had stated:

"From this examination, it becomes evident that the Company is in strong financial condition, that its affairs are ably managed, and that the business of the Company is being operated in the interests of its policyholders."

One out of every five persons in this country is a Metropolitan policyholder. If, like Mr. Barton, you are one of this group, you'll be more than interested in the things he learned. Even if you're not a policyholder, you cannot help but enjoy reading Mr. Barton's account of what Metropolitan did in 1944 for the benefit of policyholders and public.

If you'd like a copy of this Annual Report to Policyholders, send in the little coupon below. It's yours for the asking.

Scouts Named For York Trip On Saturday

Ten Boy Scout winners of a trip to York, Pa., offered by The Washington Post to troops collecting the most waste paper last February were announced yesterday by the D. C. salvage committee.

The boys, each representing the highest scoring troop or club pack in each of the 10 area Scout districts, will leave Saturday at 8 a. m., accompanied by Scout and salvage officials, for an all day trip to York to visit the Schmidt & Ault Paper Co. and see salvage converted into war materials. They will also tour a nearby ammunition factory.

After being interviewed by the York press, having lunch with the mayor, and appearing on a broadcast, they will return here at 9 p. m.

Names and troops of the winning boys are: Andy Dermison, 13, of 18 Needle Green, Troop 64; Bruce Fleming, 13, of 5 Arlington rd., Troop 686; William Purcell, 14, of 1509 Colonial Terrace, Troop 56; Thomas Johnson, 14, of 308 Aspen st. nw., Troop 56; Edward Sparks, 14, Crabbe ave., Troop 231; Frank Sarles, 12 of 242 N Granada, Troop 148; Thurman Biggs, 15, of 7271 Brinkley rd. se., Troop 244; "Buddy" C. Smith, 14, of 114 W. Cameron rd., Troop 147; Ellsworth Hawkins, 14, of 2626 Sheridan rd. se., Troop 512; and Mathew Protos, 16, of 5704 16th st. nw., Troop 83.

Tattered Ruhr Proves Success Of Bombings

Twenty-first Army Group, March 11 (AP).—The master bomber plan, designed three years ago by Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris of the Royal Air Force for the elimination of all German industry, has been a tremendous success in the Ruhr, it may be revealed today.

Not a town of industrial consequence nor a major industrial works of any worth in an area 15 by 30 miles has been left intact. Whole areas have been churned into a wasteland and at least 65 German towns have suffered the same destruction as Cologne.

In examining the ruins of Cologne and other industrial towns west of the Rhine to assess from the ground what Allied Air Forces have achieved, the bomber command experts have found they underestimated damage by between 10 and 15 per cent.

One staff officer of the RAF said the destruction of Cologne was far greater than that at Stalingrad.

In an area to the north, Allied attacks have left a 450-square mile area of ruin including the cities of Duisburg, Homberg, Mulheim, Oberhausen, Essen, Bochum, Dueseldorf and Dortmund—all from 40 to 80 per cent destroyed.

Officers said there was no answer to the technique of mixing 2-ton bombs with thousands of incendiaries. Photographs taken after the last raid on Magdeburg showed 2000 separate fires burning, they revealed.

Chaplain Here From Aleutians Say GIs Ask Dynamic Church

Capt. Raymond Firth, Army chaplain on furlough from the Aleutians and former minister of Seat Pleasant Methodist Church, said yesterday that servicemen will expect a "dynamic church" when they return from the wars.

He spoke at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, 11th and H sts. ne., where chimes and a plaque were dedicated for the congregation's 80 men in the armed forces.

Chaplain Firth said the fighting men want to return to a church that best expresses the basic things for which they are fighting, such as brotherhood. He said they will not be satisfied with a religion which is too denominational, too dogmatic or too ritualistic.

The Rev. William F. Wright, pastor, conducted the service, and Mrs. Ernest J. Ruffner, 200 Evaris st. ne., chairman of the dedication arrangements, unveiled the plaque, which bore names of her two sons, Maj. Ralph R. Ruffner and Sgt. Melvin Ruffner, both with the infantry in France.

Three Gold Stars are on the flag for Army Lieut. Ernest W. Christen, Marine Sgt. I. B. Faullen and Army Sgt. Charles E. Small. Services were climaxed with reading of the servicemen's names by the Rev. Mr. Wright and the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

When war broke out in Europe in September, 1939, there were less than 200,000 men in the United States Army and less than 100,000 in the Navy.

New York, March 11. DANCE DEPT.: Danilova, the ballet star, listened to a discussion about her rival, Tomanova. "She has a phenomenal sense of balance," Danilova was told. "Tomanova can stand on one foot for more than three minutes. Isn't that remarkable?" "I haven't time to do that," said Danilova. "I'm much too busy dancing."

FINANCE DEPT.: A few years ago, before the Theater Guild produced its recent series of hits, the directors studied their balance sheet and learned that money would have to be raised quickly. A suggestion was made that Lawrence Langner go to Jesse Jones at the RFC and borrow $250,000. "But what security can you offer?" Langner was asked. "We'll show him our manuscripts," the producer proposed. Jones refused the loan, which might have made Uncle Sam a partner in "Oklahoma" and other hits. "But Uncle Sam is a partner anyhow, getting a minimum of $100,000 per week from the admission and income taxes on the Guild's shows."

ENGLISH DEPT.: Royal Arch Gunnison, the first correspondent to return from Manila, tells of Gordon Walker, the Christian Science Monitor's correspondent in the Philippines, who received a cable from his editor: "Please cut out adjectives from stories." Walker backed back: "If you don't like adjectives take them out yourself," then went to sleep under his mosquito netting. The next morning Walker stepped from his cot and found the floor sprinkled with shrapnel. He sent one piece of shrapnel to his editor with a note: "If you had these cutting through your mosquito netting while you slept, you would use adjectives, too." His editor, Chuck Grutke, immediately cabled: "Letter received. Contents noted. Use all adjectives you want."

Social Note: When Walter Cat the film comic, lived in New York his favorite place was the Lambs Club. He ate there, drank there, slept there. Then one night he drank a bit too much and disappeared for two weeks. When he returned to the Lambs, he met his friend, Lou Calhern, and reported: "Hey, Lou—do you know that the Astor is only one block away?"

Lost and Found: Gen Carlos P. Romulo's reunion with his family in the Philippines now is complete. He met his wife and two sons on March 2. The other two sons are in the Army. He found his brother, a doctor, in Dagupan, near the coast. Then he drove to Camiling by jeep, came to a house where an 84-year-old lady was reading on the porch, and called to her. This was his reunion with his mother. "When Romulo addressed Congress on December 7, 1944, he shook so many hands that he lost his Sigma Delta Chi black onyx ring bearing his fraternity key. It slipped off during the Congressional hand-shaking, and he still hasn't found it."

LOCAL NEWS: Lady Stanley, the former Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, has taken an 8-hour-a-day job in a British factory. . . . Bill Corum is headed overseas on a special mission for the air forces. The ribbons on his uniform include three Silver Stars and a Purple Heart. Corum was the youngest major in the last war. . . . Gen. George Patton deplores the report that he carries two pearl-handled revolvers. "Any fool would know that you can't shoot straight with pearl-handled," said Patton. "Mine are ivory" . . . The Eversharp Co. this week offered Walter Winchell, who certainly can use it, $10,000 per weekly broadcast, for five years.

MOVIES: Capt. Jesse Lasky, Jr., and Maj. Jack Hively, the Hollywood men, just returned to New York after serving in General MacArthur's combat-photography department. One of their friends told them that he had arranged for an apartment on West 54th st. They immediately went there and surveyed the small, drab and dismal rooms. "The only guy who could get away with taking a girl to this place," sighed Lasky, "is Humphrey Bogart."

THEATER NOTE: In Sardi's Jo Mielziner, the stage designer, was going over his designs for the new musical, "Carousel." All stage units, he explained—sofas, windows, doors, bookcases, etc.—are designed to a maximum 5 feet 9, because freight-car doors are 5 feet 9 and the furniture shouldn't be larger if the show is to go on tour. . . . "I guess I was born to be a stage designer," said Mielziner. "I, too, am exactly 5 feet 9."

TAX DEPT.: Oscar Hammerstein told his lawyer: "I foresaw the current years ago, when I started going to bed before midnight. And I foresaw the cigaret shortage years ago, when I gave up smoking." . . . "You should have foreseen this years ago," said the lawyer to Hammerstein, who, after 10 inactive years, emerged with two big hits—"Oklahoma" and "Carmen Jones"—and showed him his high income tax return.

"Silly" Dispute

Representative John M. Coffee is right in saying that the boundary dispute between the District and Virginia is "rather silly."

Arlington County went back under Virginia's jurisdiction 99 years ago. No effective line between the two areas has since been drawn.

Today every crime in the area and even such matters as the issuance of death certificates give rise to disputes. That is certainly a ridiculous situation for Congress to perpetuate at the very gates of the Nation's Capital.

We do not think that Mr. Coffee has made any contribution to a settlement, however,

by suggesting that exclusive jurisdiction over the Washington National Airport be given to the Civil Aeronautics Board. Could that board be reasonably asked to set up a police system, courts, a health department and other agencies of local government? It strikes us that this idea is even more absurd than prolongation of this boundary dispute.

Legislators who deplore the existence of this

no-man's land could more effectively use their influence by demanding that a new line be drawn so as not to cut off a slice from the already cramped District. Better still, they could ask for the return of all Arlington

County while there is still time to develop

it in harmony with the Capital of which it is functionally a part.

Higher Gold Price

As an alternative to reducing the minimum required reserve ratios against Federal Reserve notes and deposits to 25 per cent it has been suggested that the price of gold be raised from $35 to $56 an ounce. The resultant 60 per cent upward valuation of gold reserves would permit of a further tremendous expansion of Federal Reserve

obligations on the basis of present required

minimum reserves of 40 per cent against

Federal Reserve notes and 35 per cent against deposits. If the sponsors of this proposal to raise the price of gold had deliberately tried to aggravate inflationary tendencies at home and to destroy the confidence of foreigners in the stability of the dollar,

they could not have hit upon a better means to attain their ends.

The devaluation of the dollar and the accompanying rise in the price of gold from $20.67 to $35 per ounce in 1934 was a grave

mistake, as subsequent events have proved.

It was a highly unbalancing influence

throughout the period preceding the outbreak of war, felt both within the country and abroad. To repeat that ill-advised experiment in these critical days would be an unpardonably irresponsible act, needlessly alarming to the public, that might precipitate

a flight from the dollar into goods and real property—an inflationary manifestation that the Government has been trying hard to prevent. A further lowering of the value of the dollar in terms of gold would also create unease among Government bondholders and make it increasingly difficult for the Treasury to place new security issues with nonbank investors.

Last, but by no means least, an arbitrary change in the gold value of the dollar at this time would be equivalent to sabotaging the Bretton Woods monetary agreements. For those agreements are based on the assumption that the dollar will remain stable in terms of gold. As Dr. Randolph

Burgess, president of the American Bankers

Draft Of Nurses

The House showed good judgment, in our opinion, in amending the nurse draft bill

as well as in passing it by the overwhelming vote of 347 to 42. Several mischievous amendments, including one designed to require further recruiting efforts for 30 days before the draft could go into effect, were properly rejected, although sometimes by a slim margin. On the other hand, the House accepted the Thomason amendment which limits the obligation of married nurses and those with dependent children to registration. Only single nurses between the ages of 20 and 45 are to be inducted.

The country is said to have approximately 260,000 qualified graduate nurses now in civilian pursuits, and only 18,500 are needed to meet the present requirements of the Army and Navy. These can undoubtedly be supplied by drafting single nurses only.

In the circumstances there would be no point in breaking up the homes of married nurses. We think the House was wise to reject the all-out measure. The safe rule to follow in cases of this sort is to go as far as may be necessary to assure our fighting forces of all the support they will need,

but to accomplish that desired result with minimum disturbance to civilian efficiency.

Constitutional arguments against the bill seem to have evaporated. The authority of Congress to impose on the individual citizen

a duty of service to the Nation in wartime is so well established that it is not likely to be challenged effectively. In this instance

Congress has extended the draft for the first time to a single professional group.

But we do not see that the principle is different from the induction of men best qualified to fight under Selective Service.

The House has simply extended the bounds of the group that may be called upon for defense of their country. Male as well as female nurses are included. In view of the imperative need of our armed forces for more nursing personnel, we hope that the Senate will not trifle with this bill as it has done with the proposed draft of manpower for war plants.

Food Inventory

We welcome the action of the War Food

Administration in refusing to honor further military requests for extra relief rations

until it has a clearer picture of the relief situation as a whole. For UNRRA is also seeking a larger share of our food supplies, and the governments of liberated areas are arranging to purchase food here for shipment abroad. The people of Europe are shockingly undernourished and require aid until they can grow their own food. Liberated areas in the South Pacific are likewise making unexpectedly heavy demands on our food reserves, and the rapidly growing number of war prisoners increases the drain.

All this is in addition to the provisioning of the Army and Navy and the meeting of commitments made under lend-lease contracts.

And these stepped up demands come at a time when domestic shortages of meats, dairy products and other foods are becoming acute.

Under the circumstances it is plainly necessary to take an inventory of what we have or can reasonably expect to have in the months ahead and then estimate the over-all relief food demands of those who have a just claim to assistance. That is now being done by a special committee headed by FEA Administrator

Leo T. Crowley. His aim is to pool the food relief demands of the military, UNRRA and the governments of liberated areas that are prepared to pay for their purchases of food. By such means it is hoped to avoid conflicts among procurement officials entailing waste and duplication of effort.

The administrative problems of WFA will also be greatly lightened if that agency deals with only one instead of numerous requests for relief food.

An over-all relief program of the kind contemplated is not designed to reserve for American civilians food needed by our hungry allies, unless a survey should show that

Father Rhine

The passage of American armies across the Rhine and the steady widening of the bridgeheads on the right bank have a metaphysical significance which is almost as great as the military significance. The Rhine, zum deutschen Rhein, is more than a river; it is a symbol of Germany that the Germans themselves have chosen. Here classical civilization found its uttermost frontier. Westward from the Rhine the German warriors have swarmed in their successive historical irruptions. Out of the Rhine mists has arisen the strange and cruel mythology which has played such a pernicious part in the shaping of the German imagination.

Out of these mists come the legends of the Nibelungen. While they were bathing in the Rhine waters occurred the fateful quarrel of Brunhilde and Gundrun, with its long sequel of vengeance, lust, cruelty, perfidy and murder.

From these pagan legends with their specious Christian trappings, Richard Wagner fashioned the great cycle of operas which was presently to exercise such a powerful influence on the imagination and emotions of Germans in general and Adolf Hitler, the new Siegfried, as he fancied himself, in particular.

In the same legends Alfred Rosenberg found the substance of his fantastic and barbaric theories.

The great part that Rhenish twilight, carried into the Nibelungenlied and into the Wagnerian operas, has played in providing the moral and emotional climate of Nazi Germany is perhaps too seldom realized. The Rhine, with its mists, with its crags and its castles and its innumerable legends, was also the real cradle of late eighteenth century

Romanticism; certainly it produced in our time a romanticism that has shaken the world and saturated it with blood. But Hitler and with him the nation that was seduced

by a sensual vision and intoxicated by a song

are moving nearer and nearer to shipwreck

and are soon to disappear into the whirlpool of history.

Job Equality By Law

THIS WEEK the Senate Committee on Labor will hold hearings on a bill to set up a permanent Federal "Fair Employment

Practice Commission." Such a commission already exists, but does not have statutory authority

—it was set up by an executive order of President Roosevelt as a wartime agency. The present proposal in Congress is to make the commission permanent.

On this proposal hearings have already been held in the House.

As a result of the House hearings, a bill has been written, H. R. 2232.

What is here written is based on the language of this bill, and testimony at the hearings held by the House committee.

The bill prohibits, and penalizes discrimination in employment "because of race, creed, color, national origin, or ancestry." The bill applies to all employers of more than five persons, and to labor unions. (The bill applies also to some other groups.)

As to labor unions, the prohibition is that they must not "deny full membership rights" or otherwise "discriminate."

As to employers, the prohibition is that they must not "refuse to hire," or "discharge," or

"discriminate" in "compensation,"

or in other terms or conditions of employment.

FOR ENFORCING these and other prohibitions, the "Fair

Employment Practice Commission" is empowered to order anyone whom the commission deems guilty of discrimination to "cease

Gesture to France

By Ernest Lindley

The President And Gen. de Gaulle

THE PRESIDENT seized upon the visit of eight French correspondents on Friday to express his friendship for France and his good will toward General de Gaulle. He made no reference to De Gaulle's recent snub, or to the previous occasions on which the French leader behaved oddly, to state it mildly. His comments were those of a strong man who is willing to overlook bad manners on the part of a somewhat distraught friend.

The President's friendship for France scarcely needed affirmation. It has been profound and enduring—based as it is both on old, pleasant associations and a firm realization of the interlocking security interests of the two nations. It was never questioned anywhere until De Gaulle and some of his associates unwisely resorted to anti-U. S. and anti-Roosevelt propaganda.

IT IS NO SECRET that De Gaulle, at first, did not make a good impression on Roosevelt. De Gaulle's tendency to regard himself as a personification of the virtues of France, and as a sort of reincarnation of its great leaders of the past, would not have made a favorable impression on any man with Roosevelt's knowledge of the French and faith in the future. Besides, as the record clearly shows, De Gaulle sometimes put his own political ambitions—insupportable as these have seemed in his own mind from the interests of France—ahead of winning the war.

When De Gaulle came to the United States last year, however, he was well received, and Roosevelt and he got along well personally. Now, as then, Roosevelt seems disposed to overlook the general's personality and the blunders that these have not done more damage to U. S.-French relations is also due to the fact that many American observers draw a distinction between De Gaulle's diplomacy and the French people. If De Gaulle's diplomacy were to remain unchanged and if it were to become generally regarded in this country as a true reflection of the attitude of the French people, the outlook for U. S.-French relations would be very bad indeed.

When the French-Russian alliance was signed, it provoked some criticism in the United States. But it was widely defended as a regional agreement which would fit into the agreements among other powers concerning the enforcement of peace terms on Germany, and into the proposed world security organization. The latter view gradually prevailed—at least in official circles in Washington.

But recently dispatches, in effect, confirmed the misgivings which a minority in the United States had voiced. They implied that, in the French view, the Russo-French pact meant in the long run Stalin and De Gaulle were going to make the critical decisions regarding Germany, irrespective of the views of Britain and the United States and of the other United Nations. De Gaulle apparently was put out when he found that Stalin did not interpret the pact in that way.

NOW THE PROVISIONAL French government has rejected the invitation to become a sponsor of the San Francisco Conference, although it will take part in the proceedings. Hints have come from Paris that the French are getting ready to pose as a special champion of the small nations, although they have not said definitely what amendments they will propose to the Dumbarton Oaks plan, as supplemented at Yalta. It is doubtful if the attempt would accomplish much. Most of the small nations are more interested in the secure organization of the peace than in abetting a dubious French policy of seeking prestige by pin-pricks.

The hope in official circles in Washington is that the Provisional French Government will calm itself and be prepared to enter the negotiations and discussions concerning the organization of the peace with its eyes fixed on the large and true interests of France. The President's expressions of good will on Friday were intended to help to stimulate such a trend.

Only 2 Ratifications Needed For United Nations Food Plan

By the Associated Press

Ratification by only two more nations is needed to put into operation the food and agriculture organization of the United Nations, Canadian Ambassador L. B. Pearson revealed yesterday.

Pearson, chairman of the United Nations "interim commission on food and agriculture," which was formed at the Hot Springs (Va.) International Food Conference in 1943 and authorized to draw up a constitution and tentative program for the new organization, said 18 nations had officially agreed to accept the plan.

Twenty acceptances are needed to bring the constitution into force. Nations which have accepted are:

Moscow, March 11 (AP)—Nearly 10,000 American, British and French former prisoners of the Germans are awaiting repatriation at Odessa, Pravda said today, reporting that 3413 sailed for home last week.

Wednesday and Thursday 969 United States soldiers and 227 officers left in steamers which also carried 1391 Britons and 826 French nationals. There now are 2000 United States soldiers and 250 officers in Odessa, which has been turned into a transit camp for Allied nationals liberated in western Poland and eastern Germany by the Red army.

They were scheduled to continue to the United States by plane.

Senate War Probe Committee Calls Workers From Detroit

By the Associated Press

The Senate subcommittee investigating war production in the Detroit area yesterday summoned approximately a dozen plant workers as witnesses for its sessions today.

Also to be heard were management representatives from a number of factories whose operations were mentioned by labor spokesmen at Saturday's sessions and officers of the Army, Navy and Air Forces procurement agencies.

Already in the record were statements by management representatives accusing labor unions of attempting to usurp management functions and assertions by union spokesmen that management was sacrificing the war effort in planning for postwar markets.

George Romney, managing director of the Automotive Council for War Production, charged labor with "thwarting efforts to get productive efficiency," while Walter P. Reuther, United Automobile Workers (CIO) vice president, accused management of refusing to bargain collectively for the elimination of grievances.

Agree on Low Output
Romney and Reuther agreed that production in Detroit area factories was considerably below capacity. They disagreed sharply, however, as to the reason, and Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), suggested that in at least some instances, neither management nor labor was at fault, but some fault probably attached to governmental procurement agencies in not taking full advantage of production capacity.

Romney and Reuther agreed there was no overall manpower shortage in the Detroit area. Both asserted the area should not have been classified as a critical labor shortage area and the classification had kept additional war materiel contracts away from it.

Labor Leader "Cynical"
The committee in a late Saturday night session heard Matthew Smith, national secretary of the Mechanics Educational Society of America (Independent) assert that he was "cynical about what hap-

Russian Method Of Warfare

WITH THE BALKAN WAR just next door, the relationship between the British and Americans on one hand and the Russians on the other is closer here than it is at any other point. This inevitably sharpens the contact between the way in which the Russians fight the war and the way in which we fight it.

The reaction of American and British officers to those differences has interested me as much as anything else in this theater of operations. They are well aware that the Russian way is different from ours. Many of them express respect, which is something tinged with envy, for the Russian way of war. At the same time they recognize that, given our standards of living and our concern for the welfare and lives of individuals, we could not approximate the Soviets' simplified approach.

For example, Russian officers are required to do almost no paper work in connection with the records of individual men. An Allied officer asked a Russian officer how the next of kin were notified when a Russian soldier was killed. He was told that there was no notification—that if an individual failed to return home, then he was presumed to be dead.

ONE EXPLANATION for the Russians' reluctance to allow American officers into areas they control in the Balkans is their sensitivity over the contrast between the standards of living of the respective armies. "If we permitted you to come up to our front, we should have to provide a special cook," a Russian general told a British general.

Soviet troops live simply and they often live off the country. Their food is of the plainest sort. However, vodka is provided in sufficient quantities.

Often, simple Russian techniques that require little or no equipment prove more efficacious than the abundance of supplies made available to the Americans. For example, there was less frostbite on the Russian Front during the winter than on the Western Front, because the Russians adopted a system of reciprocal foot massage. Failure to obey instructions met with severe penalties. You massage my feet and, in turn, I massage yours. If I get frostbite, it means you have been remiss and dire things will happen to you.

When the Russians come into a country, they are not concerned with what they can do for the civilian population. The emphasis, instead, is on what the local population can provide for the troops. That is specifically stated in the treaty with a conquered people. British and Americans responsible for the welfare of Italians shake their heads in envy and wonder at Russian forthrightness.

Everyone with whom I have talked agrees on the correctness of the behavior of Soviet troops when they enter a "liberated" city. You see no drunkenness, no disorder. The conduct of the Russians toward the women of the local population is said to be exemplary. And no special

Hines, Heads of Veterans' Units To Discuss U.S. Hospitals Today

Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines said yesterday he would "go into the whole question of veterans' hospitalization" today with commanders of three veterans' organizations.

Asserting "our hospitals are on a par with any in this country," General Hines answered recent criticism against his administration in a radio interview.

Representative Philbin (D., Mass.) last Wednesday introduced a House resolution for a congressional investigation of what he called "alleged inhuman conditions and irregularities" in the treatment of hospitalized war veterans.

Hines said yesterday he is making "a thorough investigation of every hospital."

"In addition," he said, "in order that all the facts may be known to the American people, I have invited the national commanders of the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars to meet with me today here in Washington and go into the whole question of veterans hospitalization."

"I know too that millions of veterans who have been treated in veterans' facilities during the past 20 years will also make their views known."

"And intend that the facts and all the facts developed shall be given to the public, without any attempt to embellish or belittle."

Of assertions that the death rate in veterans' hospitals is high, General Hines said:

"Many of our patients are old. They are the fighters of former wars and they seldom go to a hospital until they are in a very bad physical condition. It is not unusual for many of these old timers to die but I'll challenge anyone to say that the death rate among younger men is any higher in a Veterans Administration facility than it would be in any other hospital in the country."

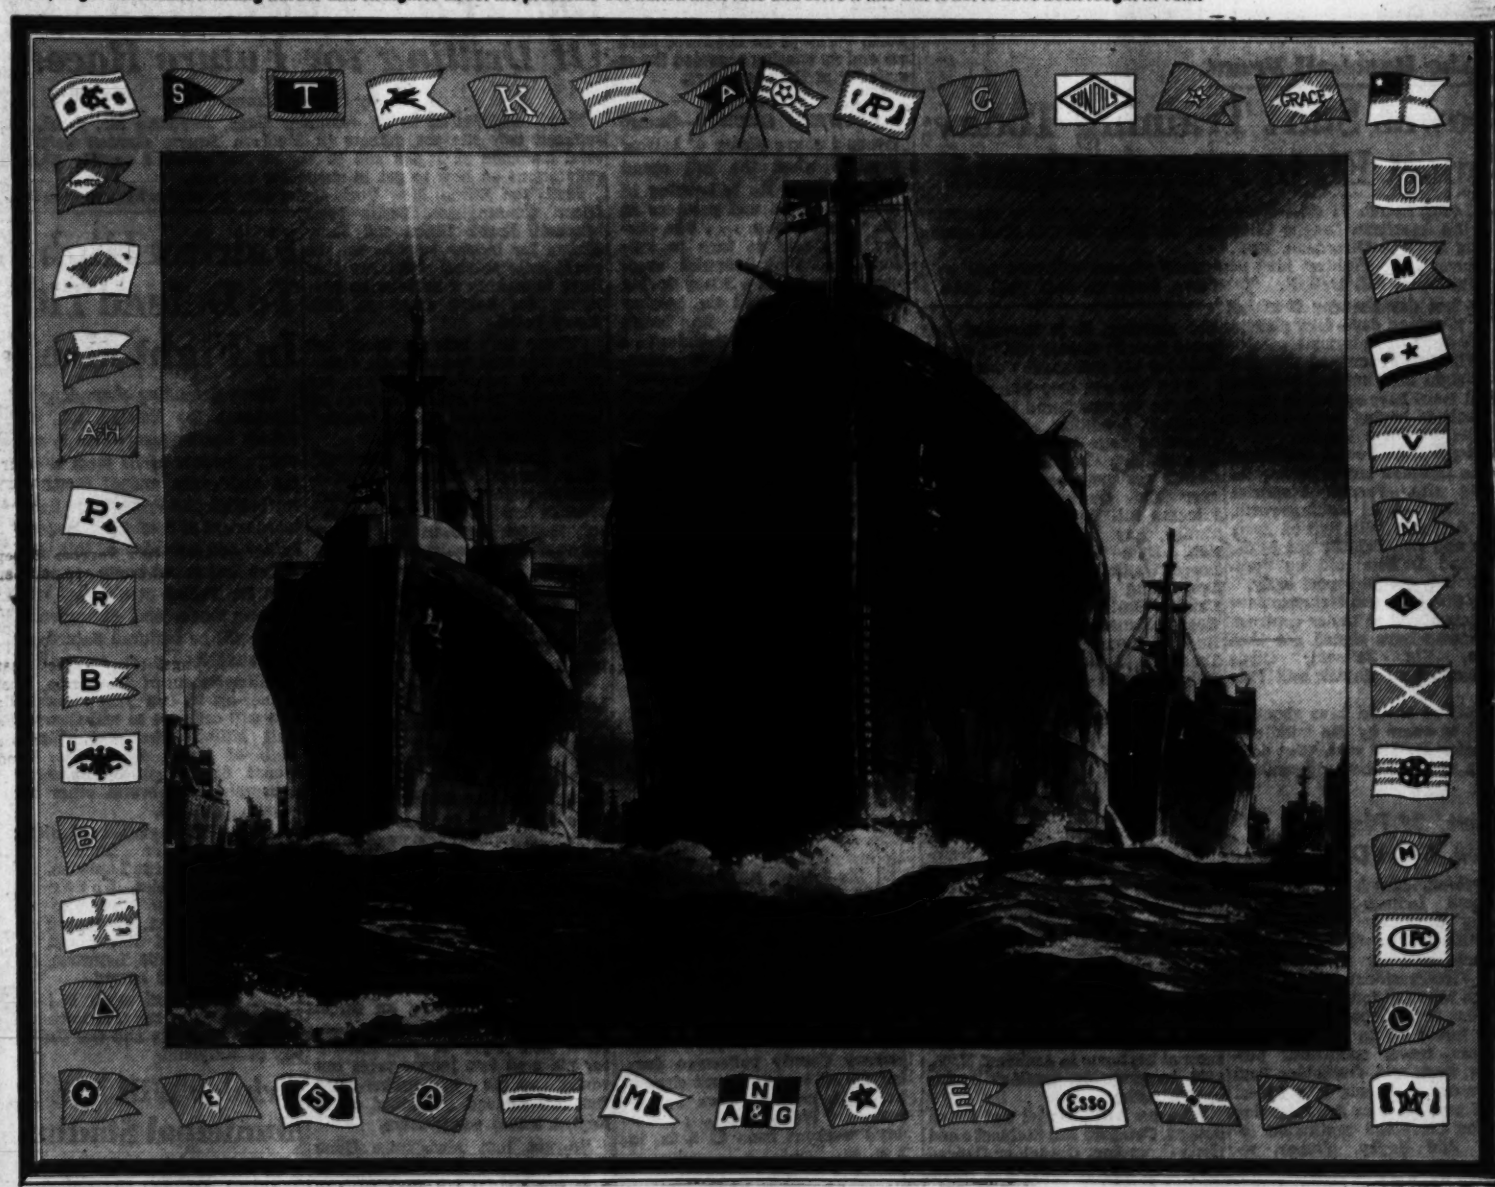

Hines said that 29 World War veterans, or less than 2 per cent, have died at Mount Alto, a veterans' hospital here.

Foreign newspaper correspondents have been allowed in Bucharest for only a limited time, and not at all in Sofia. So far as I have been able to determine, only one Allied officer—an American colonel—has visited Budapest since the siege and capitulation. Others have wanted to go, as have many newspaper correspondents, but the way has not been opened by the Russians.

I saw many Russian soldiers and officers in Yugoslavia. You got an impression of energy and good will. Yet you could see, too, the price they had paid for their tremendous victories. The tired, old, young faces of officers showed prolonged strain.

The chief cities held by the Russians thus far are Sofia, Bucharest and Budapest. American officers have participated in the joint Allied control of Sofia and Bucharest, but the real authority is wielded by the Soviets, who took these cities.

This is the ninth of a series of advertisements which TIME, The Weekly Newsmagazine, is running in newspapers and magazines from coast to coast, to get Americans thinking harder and straighter about the problems our nation must face and solve if this war is not to have been fought in vain.

modified the constitution—which he established in 1937—so as to return to the people the direct vote in the election of President, governors of states, Parliament and state legislative assemblies.

In his speech, first since he addressed the armed forces December 31, Vargas promised the elections "soon" in a "calm atmosphere."

Following his decree amending the constitution, the president saw newsman but gave evasive answers when asked whether he would be a candidate. It was indicated at that time he would be available should he be drafted by a political party. Today's declaration still leaves that possibility open.

Whether Vargas would be a candidate had been one of the hottest questions in Brazil's presently intense political activity. Opposition forces to date have presented a united front behind Air Maj. Gen. Eduardo Gomes, but Gomes has not said whether he would accept.

Mountbatten Closes Sessions With Chiang

Chungking, March 11 (AP)—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme commander in southeast Asia, today concluded a four-day series of military conferences here with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Subject of their discussion was not announced. Mountbatten, as supreme commander in Burma, is in charge of Chinese troops operating in that theater, his command extending to the Burma-China border.

Russ Hodges, WOL and Mutual's ace sportscaster, is about as good natured a fellow as we know, but recent events have been a strain on his temper. . . . When Mutual assigned Russ to give a play-by-play description of the Army-Navy basketball game at Annapolis recently, one of the MBS bigwigs wanted to know if Russ was an experienced announcer. . . . Then to add insult to injury, a well-known New York collegiate basketball coach, whose team had just finished playing the first half of a double-header at Uline's Arena the other night, ambled over to Russ, who was handling the mike for the benefit of the crowd, and remarked: "Buddy, if you don't mind, I'll handle this thing the next game and show you how its done in the big time." . . . Russ' reply was a pip: "Look, pal," he said, "I get two bucks a game for this and with March 15 nearing, I need the cash." . . . Just to set the MBS bigwig and New York coach right, we'll give you a little of Russ' background. . . . He started broadcasting basketball games in Indiana many years ago, a pioneer at the business, you might say, and has worked over 1000 contests. . . . We would say, he knows how to handle a mike. . . . Randy Edwards, former Montgomery Blair High School strike-out king, has signed with the Philadelphia Athletics and will report to the A's training camp at Frederick, Md., today. . . . Randy turned down offers from seven other big league clubs to go with Connie Mack. . . . Zeke Bonura, former Nat first sacker and now a sergeant in the Army, reports from somewhere in France: "I do hope they continue baseball this summer and all the fellows I've met here feel the same way. Baseball is America's national game and the most popular sport among the G.I.s." . . . Walter (Duster) Mails, the old Cleveland pitcher recently discharged from the Marines, has finished a Red Cross course at American University and is headed for overseas duty. . . . Archie Michael, 155-pound champion of the Iowa Seahawk boxing team, was graduated from high school in Richmond, Va., when he was only 15. . . . Twenty now, he spent the intervening years before enlisting in the Navy as a shipfitter, metal worker, and draftsman at the Newport News naval station. . . . He won the station title at Glenview, Ill., before going to Iowa City. . . . Walt Johnson tried out with the Los Angeles club in 1906 and was sent to Wesler, Idaho, to learn control. . . . Dick Duden, Navy backfield star, will probably be shifted to end next fall. . . . According to information we picked up at the Army-Navy basketball game, the Middies have an oversupply of ace backs and there isn't a spot for Duden. . . . The Middies plan, also, to send Tom Jenkins from the fullback spot. . . . That was his position as a freshman star at Alabama. . . . University of Virginia is planning a big expansion for its athletic plant after the war. . . . The new plant will provide facilities for 5000 students and will cost 10 million dollars.

Browns Start Training Today; Report Eight Players Signed

St. Louis, March 11 (AP)—Nose-counting will be in order tomorrow when the American League Champion St. Louis Browns open spring training at Cape Girardeau, Mo. . . . "I haven't the slightest idea how many players will turn up," said Vice President Bill DeWitt. "I believe, however, that we'll have a better first day showing than last year." (Opening day—four players; a week later—10 players.) . . . DeWitt has announced the signing of eight men but has indicated several more have agreed to terms. He admitted having salary trouble with two he did not name. . . . Manager Luke Sewell and Coach Freddie Hoffman left today for the training site. Vernon Stephens, Frank Mancuso, Al Hollingsworth, Mark Christman, Milt Byrnes, Boris Martin and Len Schulte are in St. Louis and DeWitt said he "presumed" they would report early. . . . Only Stephens and Mancuso have been announced as under contract. Others who have signed are Tom Turner, Sig Jakucki, Clyde Humphrey, Sam Zoldak and Pete Gray. . . . "In all we should have about 20 players in camp by the middle of the week," DeWitt said. "I couldn't ask me to name them. I couldn't do it."

Indians, 24 Players

Signed, Open Drills Today

Cleveland, March 11 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians open spring training tomorrow at Lafayette, Ind., with 24 players signed, most of whom will be in camp this week, Vice-President Roger Peckinpah reported today. . . . All but two of those signed will report tomorrow to Manager Lou Boudreau, travel conditions permitting, Peck said. Outfielder Paul O'Dea's commitments with a local dentist prevent him from leaving with the Cleveland contingent tonight. Jim Bagby, pitcher, reported earlier he might be late because he "had things to do around home," Peck said. Other reports from Young Sarge indicate he's uncertain whether he'll pitch this season, although he has signed a contract. . . . Definite holdouts are Jeff Heath, Mickey Rocco, Roy Cullenbine and Joe Heving. Observers predict the latter two will come to terms shortly on salaries. Catcher Buddy Rosar is staying on his Buffalo war job for the present. . . . Induction threatens only four of those signed, with the rest holding 4-F classifications, industrial deferments or armed service discharges. . . . Ken Keltner, accepted but not called by the Navy last year, Russ Peters, Catcher Jim Steiner, who played with Sacramento last season, and Canadian Paul Calvert still interest Selective Service.

Those signed are Pitchers Bagby, Bill Bonness, Charles Embree, Calvert, Earl Henry, George Hooks, Hal Kleine, Allie Reynolds, Al Smith, Steve Gronke, and Ed Kleiman; Catchers Ruskowski, Steiner, and George Suse; Infielders Boudreau, Keltner, Peters, Joe Desiderato, Al Chiochi, and Dick Whittington; Outfielders Ed Carnett, Myril Hoag, Pat Seery, and O'Dea. Coaches Burt Shotton and Oscar Melillo will be on hand to assist Boudreau. . . . Giants Open Drills Today; 19 Players on Deck . . . Lakewood, N. J., March 10 (AP)—Ten pitchers, three infielders, one catcher and five outfielders reported today and will start the New York Giants' 1945 spring training session at Ott Field tomorrow. . . . Eight others, some of whom are members of the Jersey City farm club and some who are here for tryouts, also showed up. With Pitcher Harry Feldman and First Baseman Phil Weintraub due in shortly after the New Year,

Nats' Powell to Sign, Reports on Wednesday

Entire Squad Due at Camp This Week

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

The slim garrison that has been holding down the fort known as "The Nats' training camp" will get plenty of reinforcements this week, according to President Clark Griffith. The Nats' chief says he will not be surprised if "20 or 25 players" are not on the College Park scene by next Friday.

The only player development yesterday was a local phone call from Outfielder Jake Powell who told Griffith he would "drop by the office tomorrow and sign." Powell who came off the Takoma Park sandlots to start his career with the Nats and then came back after flings with the Yankees and the minors, has been working as a Montgomery County policeman during the off season. He will leave the force April 1 but until then will be on the night shift and will work out starting Wednesday.

Powell is 34 and hit .240 last season. However, he was a "clutch hitter" and was his usual dependable half infield. . . . A handful of fans at yesterday's workout saw an infield in action that could be of manpower demands increase. Manager Ossie Bluege was at first Cuban Rookie Joe Redondo was at second with Pitcher Niggeling at short and Pitcher Roger Wolff at third. In addition Catcher Al Evans acted as a roving infielder. . . . They provided a half hour of entertainment with Bluege carrying off the honors in my book. . . . That was about the only change in routine. The usual pepper work, warmups for the three pitchers and fly chasing occupied the remainder of the two hours.

Between Grunts—Bluege means to have plenty of batting practice when the full squad reports. . . . He is keeping in action pitchers and catchers in the tryout group. . . . The others were told to turn in uniforms. . . . Dick Sedgwick, overseas veteran and a Silver Spring boy, has impressed the coaches despite the fact he hasn't thrown a speedball to date. . . . He has smooth-throwing action, carries himself in a "know-how" manner and doesn't get surprised if he doesn't get a thorough trial. . . . Bluege gave a special fly-chasing grill to Joe Redondo, 23-year-old Cuban imported by Scout Joe Cambria. . . . The handsome fellow proved he can haul them in and gave all the appearances of being a good prospect. . . . Nick Altrock's autograph is still eagerly sought. . . . He has a rule for kids—he won't sign without a fountain pen. . . . Joe Fisher, ardent Nat fan and close friend of Dutch Leonard, came out to see the drill. . . . If they paid off on determination and effort the Nats would have to offer a contract to Billy Carrier, a Washington boy, who aspires to being a major league catcher. . . . The 20-year-old former all-high receiver at Central has more pep than any man on the field. . . . He has played some Class C ball and his father, Bill, performed in the Appalachian League. . . . Another catcher, Sam Gray, was in uniform for the first time. . . . He's a big fellow who used to catch for the Ballston A. C. in Arlington County. . . . Looks like the news that Rick Ferrell is a holdout is getting around. . . . Jake Powell, a Montgomery County policeman during the off season, hasn't signed, but says he will when he reports on Wednesday. . . . Today's workout from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Six Yankees Report As Spring Camp Opens

Atlantic City, N. J., March 11 (AP)—Coach Art Fletcher of the New York Yankees greeted an advance guard of six players today for the opening of the club's spring training grind. . . . Fletcher said the team still had not been given permission by the Army to use the city's Convention Hall for indoor workouts and they might have to settle for an abandoned naval hangar or a high school gymnasium. . . . Manager Joe McCarthy, wiring that he still was digging out of the snow at his home in Amherst, N. Y., said he probably wouldn't arrive until Tuesday. . . . Pitchers Len Gettel and Floyd Bevens, Catchers Bill Steineke and Herb Crompton, Outfielder George Stainback and Infielder Joe Buzas worked out. . . . Another supporting bout closed for the Babe Sharkey-Golden Angel "championship" grapple at Turner Arena Wednesday night will show popular Dutch Rohde, the Camden, N. J., Cat, against George Macriostas. It was disclosed last night when the latter, rated as the best Grek matman since Jim Londor's reign, accepted terms with promoter Joe Turner. . . . The Golden Angel will arrive here tomorrow, confident that he can manhandle the burly Sharkey much in the same fashion in which he disposed of the Swedish Angel last week. This was the first defeat the huge Swedish gent has ever been handed in a District ring and it made the Golden man-in-the-mask a red-hot contender with Arena fans. . . . Blimp Levy—all 638 pounds of him—is to meet Jack Steele in the secondary tussle.

Touchdown Club To Hear Leonard

Emil "Dutch" Leonard, popular pitcher of the Washington Baseball Club, will discuss the American soldier's reaction to war time sports tomorrow when he takes over as main speaker at the Touchdown Club's luncheon at 12:30 p. m. . . . Leonard joined Frankie Frisch, "Bucky" Walters and Mel Ott in a USO tour of our fighting European front during the winter months. There they helped entertain and divert our fighting men by direct line of enemy fire during the Nazi counteroffensive in Belgium. . . . Leonard and first baseman Phil Weintraub due in shortly after the New Year,

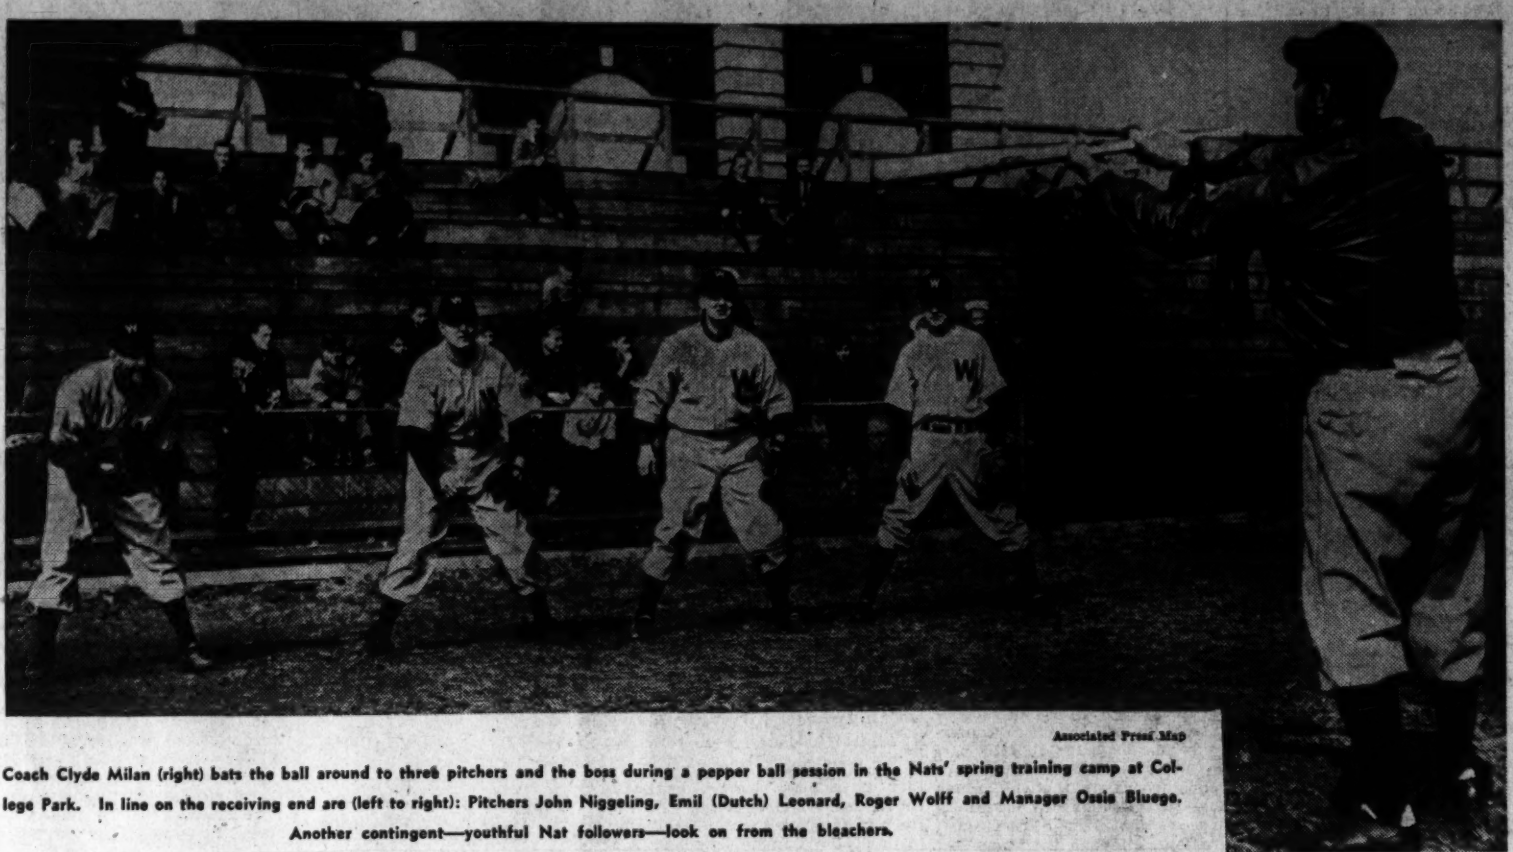

Armstrong Five Wins Va. Title

Ettrick, Va., March 11 (AP)—Armstrong High School of Richmond defeated Maggie Walker High also of Richmond, here tonight, 26-23, to win the Virginia State Negro High School basketball championship. . . . Maggie Walker went into the finals with a 25-21 victory over Huntington High of Newport News in one of two semifinals contests. In the other game Armstrong downed Carver High of Salem, 24-20.

BB, Finazzo Clash at Turner's Tonight; Sweeney on Card

The third and showdown clash between Bee Bee Washington, the District's foremost middleweight hope, and Johnny Finazzo of Baltimore is slated tonight at Turner's Arena, and indications are that the city's ring addicts will produce a record Arena crowd to see the skirmish. . . . Twice in the past two months these middleweights have fought to a draw, both in 10 rounders, so tonight they will set out on what amounts to a 30-round route in an effort to break the deadlock. . . . Washington, best fisticuff to come out of Foggy Bottom since Marty Gallagher, has been strongly supported, but Finazzo last night remained a 6 to 5 favorite. . . . Frank Sweeney, sensational Northeast soccer, goes into his toughest test when he meets Leroy Fleming in the feature of three six-rounders with which Matchmaker George Menendez is supporting the 10-round windup.

Nat Pitchers, the Boss and Coach in Pepper Ball Session

Gunder Hagg May Switch Style Of Drilling for Future Races

By Harold Classen

New York, March 11 (AP)—Gunder Hagg, Sweden's Mr. Swift, has suffered two straight defeats in Madison Square Garden before a total audience of 27,638 and so far he has received exactly 27,638 suggestions on how to get in shape for revenge. . . . Emil Von Elling, New York University mentor who has prepared Glenn Cunningham, Leslie MacMittell, Frank Dixon and Rudy Simms for indoor assaults on the world mile marks, won't say that Hagg is making a mistake by preparing for board races on soft, grassy paths. . . . "There isn't much a coach can tell a man who has set eight different world records. All I can say is that our best indoor runners all have been trained on the boards," declares the veteran coach. . . . He points to John Woodruff, lanky former Pittsburgh middle-distance runner, who avoided board practice one winter and enjoyed only meager success. The enjoyed year he concentrated on plank pounding and established records. . . . Hagg, who finished fifth in a six-man field with a personal time of 4:19.1 Saturday night, apparently isn't satisfied with his own progress from drills in Central Park. . . . "I don't seem to get anywhere on boards," he puffed in his dressing room after losing again to James Rafferty & Co., in the Columbian. "My legs still give me trouble and it will be a long time before I can do my best on the boards."

Fairfax High To Defend Title In Fight Meet

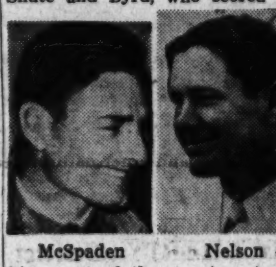

Three defending champions will represent the Fairfax, Va., High School boxing team when it steps out in defense of its team title in the eighteenth annual South Atlantic High and Preparatory School tournament at Ritchie Coliseum on Friday and Saturday of this week. . . . The first round bouts are scheduled for Friday at 8 p. m., while the semifinals and championship finals will be featured Saturday at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. respectively. . . . Miller School of Albemarle, Va., runner-up in last year's tourney, also will compete as will Charlotte Hall Military Academy, Warren High of Front Royal, Va., and Mount St. Joseph of Baltimore. . . . Acceptance of several other bids is being awaited. . . . Wallace Covington, hard hitting heavyweight; Jim Turner, 175 pounds, and George Lumsden, 155-pound combination boxer and puncher, are the boys who will represent Fairfax. Covington also has been undefeated throughout the 1945 season, while Lumsden also boasts a splendid record. . . . The tournament again is being co-sponsored by the Charlotte Hall Military Academy and the University of Maryland.

Orioles Will Use Municipal Stadium

Baltimore, March 11 (AP)—The Baltimore Baseball and Exhibition Co. has signed a contract with the Baltimore Park Board for the use of the stadium this summer by the Baltimore Orioles baseball team, it was disclosed today. . . . Under the terms of the contract, which has been submitted to the city solicitor for approval, the International League team will pay the city 12 1/2 per cent of its gross receipts after the deduction of taxes or a guarantee of $250 for each day they use the stadium, whichever is greater. . . . The regular International League schedule calls for 154 games, of which half, or 77, are scheduled to be played in Baltimore. . . . Gaddis, and now the two young prospectives have each run up five consecutive victories. . . . Victory is a precious goal for both Finazzo and the Bee Bee, as it is very probable that Menendez will select the winner to fight sensational Rocky Graziano in their opening Griffith Stadium show when the summer season arrives. . . . Bitter arguments have ensued between both camps since the last battle. Finazzo's manager, Joe Wallace, claims Washington was not entitled to last the full route, claiming the Bee Bee was given an unduly long rest after being floored by Johnny in the fifth round. Time was consumed in wiping the resin off Washington's gloves when he arose, and Wallace howled loudly from Finazzo's corner. . . . Still, Washington showed remarkable recuperative powers after two knockdowns. He came on to out-slug Finazzo in the late rounds and capture the draw decision. . . . A third sixer features Eddie Finazzo, brother of Johnny, against Al Johnson.

'Gold Dust Twins' Score, 8 and 6, Over Byrd, Shute Team

Miami, Fla., March 11 (AP)—Byron Nelson and Harold McSpaden, who finally got the hang of team play and turned into a devastating combination, overwhelmed Sammy Byrd and Denny Shute, 8 and 6, today in the final match of the $7,500 international four-ball golf tournament. . . . The "Gold Dust Twins" never before had advanced beyond the second round of the Miami Four Ball, but they played unbeatable golf throughout the tournament this time, and never were in serious danger. . . . They were 14 under par today for the 30 holes needed to conquer Shute and Byrd, who scored the big upset of the event yesterday in ousting Sammy Snead and Bob Hamilton. . . . Although Nelson and McSpaden carded a brilliant eight-under-par 62 on the morning 18, they could gain only a two-hole advantage over the determined Shute-Byrd team. . . . The winners went three up on the twentieth hole, then Nelson settled the issues by firing three consecutive birdies on the twenty-second, twenty-third and twenty-fourth holes—winning all of them. He had, in order, a 5-foot putt for a ducce, a 10-footer for a four and a 6-footer for a three. . . . It was left to McSpaden to apply the clincher. He hit a 350-yard shot on the thirtieth, and laid his second 2 feet from the pin. Shute was short of the green with his second, and Byrd's ball barely made the playing surface. . . . After Shute had tried vainly to sink his chip, Byrd smacked his long putt. The ball went into the cup and hopped out. Byrd and Shute walked over and shook hands with the winners, conceding the putt. . . . The triumph was worth $1500 each to Nelson and McSpaden, while Byrd and Shute drew down $750 each. . . . "It's the first time we've ever teamed so perfectly," said Nelson. . . . "You know, we never went over par in a single one of our four 36-hole matches—weren't even close to going over."

Seven Veterans Form Nucleus Of Central's 1945 Track Team

By Newton Bowers
Post Staff Writer

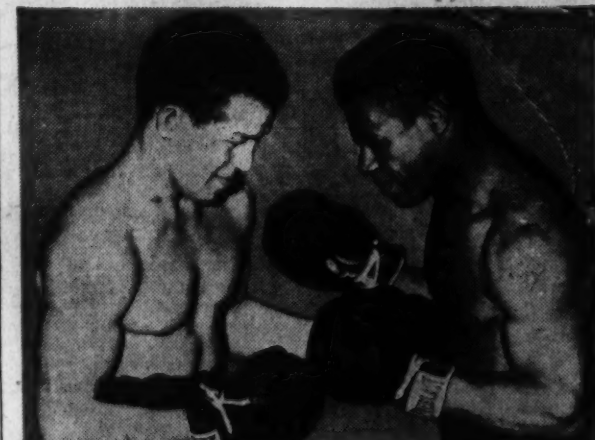

Central High School's track team doesn't look forward to one of its better seasons, according to its veteran coach, Alfred (Doc) Collins, but it may come up with a winner despite the good coach's report. . . . The Vikings have a tough schedule of seven meets, including the annual interhigh affair which will prevail on May 24 and 25, and Collins is resting his hopes on seven boys from last year's squad and a handful of very promising novices. . . . Of the seven returning veterans, only two bear letters—Hubert (Huss) Nucel and Don (Parson) Miers. Nucel will guide the squad as this year's captain. . . . Nucel Rated Highly . . . Nucel was ranked rather high in the esteem of various coaches last year by virtue of his consistent running in the 880-yard sprints. Collins rates Nucel as his No. 1 performer. . . . Nucel's monogram-mate, Miers, has possibilities of going far in the under sport of this season. Like Nucel, he is to be graduated in June, but specializes in the 440-yard event, and according to Collins, has plenty of speed. . . . And that about sizes up the lettermen—the nucleus of Central's hopes. . . . Five other boys who are expected to see plenty of action are Joe Shuman, 440-yarder; Jim Ewin, high jump and pole vault events; Bob Krissoff, low hurdles specialist; Tom Gonzales, discus topper; and Dan Gillett, sprinter. All are left-overs from last year's squad. . . . Several Newcomers . . . Krissoff appears to be the most prospective of the five. The stellar hurdlerman was on the shelf most of last season, due to an attack of appendicitis, but Collins is looking forward to his work this year and reports he is a "natural."

Cager Involved In Fix Was Not Even a Student

New York, March 11 (AP)—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia said today investigation had disclosed that one of the five Brooklyn College athletes involved in the recent basketball betting scandal was not a student of the school. . . . The mayor said in his weekly WNYC broadcast that his information came from Commissioner of Investigation Edgar Bromberger and that the "situation indicates laxity, indifference and negligence by the faculty that borders on the unpardonable."

Charles Town Five Edges Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 11.—A foul shot in the last 10 seconds by Harrison Rouse, guard, after David Fowler, forward, had been caught hacking, cost Martinsburg High School a 20 to 19 basketball game here last night and sent Charles Town's defending champions back to Keyser to compete in the Region 4 Tourney of the West Virginia scholastic basketball championship, March 16 and 17. . . . Martinsburg came back from an 8 to 3 first quarter and 13 to 5 half time deficit to tie the score in the third period at 13-all. Two foul shots by Glen Magaha and Gene Edwards, for the winners, gave them a 15 to 13 lead at the third quarter. The score was tied at 17 to 17 and 19 to 19 when Rouse made his charity toss. . . . Kenilworth, Buchanan Girls Meet for Title . . . Kenilworth Recreation and Buchanan will clash tonight, 7 o'clock, at Anacostia High School for the Eastern division girls' championship in the D. C. Recreation League. The league consists of girls 17 years of age and under. . . . The winner of this game will meet Columbia Recreation, Western division titlist Wednesday, 8 p. m., at Wilson for the league title.

Johnny Finazzo Bee Bee Washington

Sweeney, hardest natural puncher to come up locally in 10 years, will be leveling for his tenth straight knockout, but at no time has he met such a rough and dangerous gent as Fleming. . . . Another sixer is the long awaited rematch between Norval Gaddis and Gary Rice. The latter is the only fighter holding a triumph over

Posed as Student

"Pearlstein carried books around the campus and to practice. He got a library card. He got a substitution card to submit to the basketball coach, authorizing his engaging in basketball instead of physical education classes," Bromberger said. . . . Bromberger wrote in his report that "Brooklyn College must immediately insist upon a reversal of the result of all intercollegiate basketball games wherein it was the winner," during the spring and fall of 1944, to and including January 30, 1945, when Pearlstein was a team member. . . . Pearlstein and four other Brooklyn College athletes were expelled from the college after they told prosecuting attorneys they had accepted $1000 from two men to fix the result of the scheduled game with Akron University at Boston. . . . Mayor LaGuardia said he was powerless to effect disciplinary action against college authorities but would send today's report immediately to the board of higher education which has jurisdiction.

Pravda Chides Sweden For Neutrality Policy

Moscow, March 11 (AP).—Pravda, reviewing Sweden's neutrality in the war, said today it has placed herself in a position where her voice will not be heard when questions of the world and Europe are discussed next month in San Francisco.

"The policy of false neutrality is bearing fruit," the article said. "Certain Swedish capitalists were convinced this was the most advantageous policy, but they were mistaken."

Republic Still Presses Its Climb Toward Top; Notes of the Theater

OCCASION WAS FOUND here a short time ago to remark upon the rapid strides Republic Pictures is making in the direction of a recognized position among Hollywood major film producing companies.

The signing of Director Frank Borzage to a five-year contract as producer-director at that time was the principal prod to our interest. Mr. Borzage being one of filmdom's better veteran directors, with two Academy Awards to his credit for "Seventh Heaven" and "Bad Girl." One of his more recent hits was "His Butler's Sister," starring Deanna Durbin, and he is presently engaged on "The Spanish Main," one of the industries' most pretentious Technicolor productions.

Applying the blotter to Mr. Borzage's contractual signature, however, seems to have been only a "teaser" on Republic's part.

As intimated in one of Miss Hedda Hopper's recent reports from the film center, it is now definitely announced that John Ford has agreed to join Republic upon his release from the United States Navy. Mr. Ford is hardly one standing in need of an introduction to the picturegoing public. All it has to do is recall that it was he who was responsible for "Stagecoach," "The Informer," "The Long Voyage Home," "How Green Was My Valley" and "Grapes of Wrath," among others of his contributions to the list of films that are entitled to be called great.

And that isn't the sum total of Republic's cause for a little self-complacency, either.

Along with the Messrs. Borzage and Ford, President James B. Grainger also has articulated Al Santell as another spotlight megaphone. Mr. Santell now is putting the finishing touches on "Mexicana," his first release under the new affiliation.

Among the acting forces, John Wayne has dotted himself for another five years at Republic, and Clarence Moore, on the strength of her work in "Earl Carroll's Vanities," has been put under a seven-year contract.

All of which, no doubt, is sufficient excuse for Jake Flax's sudden assumption of the general contours of a pouter pigeon, Mr. Flax being the Republic franchise owner in the Washington territory.

When Charles Laughton, Ella Raines, Rosalind Ivan, Stanley Ridges, Henry Daniell and the others principally concerned, have run out their enthusiastic welcome in "The Suspect," the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater will be taken over by Dick Powell and his thespic associates in "Murder, My Sweet," heralded as one of the tauter murder-mystery romances. This is the one in which the formerly vocal Mr. Powell abandons the wobbly eminence of the warbler to become a "tough guy"—a private detective in the adaptation of the Chandler yarn—and get down to the serious business of being an actor. As genial and companionable as I have always known him, but a shade more serious, Dick seemed immensely pleased by the metamorphosis, on his visit to the Capital last Wednesday. The plans for his single day in Washington, by the way, were subjected to sudden and violent changes. Many of the things he had expected to do, he didn't, and the other way 'round. One of the surprising switches was RKO-Radio's cancellation of his personal appearance Wednesday night on the stage at RKO-Keith's. It was just one of those eleventh-hour things that could neither be avoided nor announced on such short notice.

The Washington Concert Ballet, the new civic organization formed by Lisa Gardiner, internationally known danseuse, will give its first public performance on Friday, March 16, at 8:30 p. m., in Roosevelt Auditorium, 13th, Upshur and Allison sts. n.w., under the sponsorship of the D. C. Recreation Department. The program will consist of a two-act presentation for "The History of the Ballet," covering the period from Louis XIV to the present. It will be interpreted by a group of 20 dancers. The Concert Ballet plans to give two performances a year. Tickets for the first now are available at the Fairway Sporting Goods Co., 1328 G st., at a price scale ranging from 90 cents to $1.20. So now you know.

Accurate Timing

Just as they did with "Casablanca" and one or two others of their wartime releases, the Warner Brothers seem once more to have punched the time clock right on the dot with "Hotel Berlin," the film version of the novel by Vicki Baum.

With the Allied circle of steel steadily narrowing around the German capital, the picture is scheduled for release on March 17 and is only a step or two away from the Earle screen.

"Hotel Berlin" has been allotted a notable cast, headed by Helmut Dantine, Faye Emerson, Andrea King, Raymond Massey, Peter Lorre, Alan Hale, George Coulouris and Henry Daniell, all of whom know their way around in this sort of thing. It was directed by Peter Godfrey.

Miss Baum's book was made a selection by the Literary Guild and will hit the bookshelves in the publisher's edition on April 1. As to how she came to write it, the author says, "Because I wanted to know what was happening inside Germany and it took a whole novel to give myself an answer. I don't know what merit my story has—if any. But it does look upon Germany not from the outside in, but from the inside out, with the eyes of someone who knows a few things about the Germans."

Maybe we'll know as much after we see the film.

Well in advance of the official opening of the campaign, plans are already under way for the participation of the Sidney B. Lust theaters in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Maryland, in the Overseas War Relief drive to supply clothing to the underclad in Europe—of which Henry J. Kaiser is national chairman and Commissioner John Russell Young the District chairman. At unspecified dates in April—definite announcement will come later—the Lust picture houses will hold special "clothing matinees," at which admission will be by a piece of wearing apparel only. This is a new application of the Christmas toy idea, which should yield much of value to the collection floating the slogan, "What can you spare that they can wear?"

The March release of "I'll Be Seeing You" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Spellbound" marks the tenth anniversary of the Selznick International Pictures trade-mark and the twenty-second anniversary of David O. Selznick's emergence as a picture producer. So, to keep the faith, Loew's Palace Theater will permit the former to nudge "Music for Millions" off its screen this Thursday. "I'll Be Seeing You" is the slightly lachrymose item starring Ginger Rogers, Joseph Cotton and Shirley Temple cited here no longer than a day or two ago.

Also-Keeping-the-Faith Note

I'll be seeing you!

COAL

for INDUSTRIAL MIRACLES along Kansas City Southern Lines

Thousands of the needs of mankind can be supplied by the miracle mineral—COAL. But coal's conversion into light, heat and power is miracle enough! Vast coal deposits along more than three hundred miles of Kansas City Southern Lines turn the wheels of progress. And where coal leaves off, natural gas and petroleum take over. But plentiful fuel is only a paragraph in the story. Here also on Kansas City Southern Lines minerals, metals and other natural wealth in amazing variety await the magical "know how" of forward-looking industries!

The Washington

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR get such excellent treatment in American hands that the Russian Government has now actually asked that its civilians inside Germany be treated as prisoners after they are liberated by the Allies.

There are about 4 million Soviet civilians held as forced laborers inside Germany, and their status has been the subject of a significant controversy.

When United States and British Armies first began liberating these work-slaves they were held as prisoners of war, but soon a deluge of complaints came from Red Army officers that the Russian civilians were being insulted.

Whereupon, the Allies segregated Russian work battalions and put them into refugee camps where they were given rations similar to that of the civilian population.

However, civilian rations are so meager in France and Belgium that the Russians have now reversed themselves and want all Russians captured or liberated by the Allies to be treated as prisoners of war. This means that they will get the same food as German prisoners who get the same ration as the American or British soldiers.

The whole question of handling displaced people, including slave laborers, refugees, and war prisoners, is one of the major Allied headaches. Some 10 million people are involved.

Note: The French, who also complained when the Allies treated their repatriated citizens as war prisoners, have now changed their mind, are pressing the United States and Great Britain to treat all noncollaborationist Frenchmen freed in Germany as prisoners so they will get Allied rations.

Believe It or Not

THE OFFICE OF DEFENSE TRANSPORTATION, the Army, Navy and the Office of War Mobilization have a joint board which passes on all requests to hold conventions. Last week, believe it or not, the ODT spent the time of important Government officials approving the right of the State Department to hold the United Nations Conference in San Francisco.

Russian Vodka

WAR MOBILIZER JIMMIE BYRNES has been regaling friends with stories of his mission to Yalta. Byrnes said he sampled Russian vodka for the first time, found that it "speaks a strong language and has lots of authority."

This recalled to Byrnes' friends

the first time the late Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, came to visit former Ambassador Litvinov at the Soviet Embassy. Litvinov proposed a toast to the United States. Knox was a little reluctant to down the potent vodka, tried to sip it. Litvinov stopped him and said: "Drink the stuff down in a hurry and you will kill the awful taste."

Garand Rifle on Top

IF YOU ASK LIEUT. GEN. GEORGE PATTON, famous for his tank attacks, what weapon, he considered the most important in the entire war, you would naturally expect the answer to be "tanks."

Patton used tanks to make his meteoric charge across France, and he used them when he went to the rescue of hard-pressed forces in the Belgium bulge.

But the other day Maj. Gen. Levin Campbell, efficient Chief of Ordnance, asked Patton that question while on a tour of the war fronts, and got a surprising answer. Patton didn't think the tank was the most important weapon of the war, but rather the Garand rifle. After considering the matter carefully, Patton replied to General Campbell as follows:

"In my opinion, the M-1 rifle (Garand) is the greatest battle implement ever devised."

"However," Patton continued, "my admiration for ordnance products does not stop with the M-1 rifle. Our machine guns, mortars, artillery and tanks are without equal on the battlefields of the world."

Stalin-De Gaulle

Agreement

IT HASN'T BEEN PUBLISHED, but a significant secret clause was incorporated in the agreements signed between Stalin and De Gaulle in Moscow last fall. Strangely enough it parallels another Russo-Franco pact signed in 1913 when the Czar, not Stalin, ruled Russia. And although Stalin has now overthrown the Czar, he has signed the same thing.

The secret clause approves a free hand for France in the West, and a free hand for Russia in the East. Also, it pledges Russia to help develop a strong independent Poland, friendly to both France and the Soviet Union.

But the amazing fact about the secret clause is that wording is identical with a pact signed by the French Ambassador to the Czar's government in 1913. A member of De Gaulle's entourage thought the wording was so strikingly similar to some-

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Gee whiz, Ma—you forget how you used to brag about how grandpop fought in the Civil War at 17!"

thing he had seen before that he asked Foreign Minister Molotov where the Russians got the wording. Molotov investigated, explained that when the Bolshevik government had cleaned out the old Czarist foreign office after the revolution, they found a copy of the old Franco-Russian pact with the same clause in it. They had preserved it ever since as a model of basic Russian foreign policy.

Council of Governors

For the first time in four years, the Democrats now control the important Council of State Governments, and Democratic National Committee Chairman Bob Hannegan is quietly maneuvering to put Gov. J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island in as the next president.

Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, now a Senator, was president of the council last year—the fourth in a line of Republicans. For the first time since 1940 there is a majority of Democratic Governors, with Democrat Herbert Maw of Utah president this year. Custom in the council is to elect a new chief executive each year, and young McGrath, the only Governor now serving his third successive term, is in line for the honor.

When Hannegan and the Rhode Island Governor lunched here last week, Hannegan refused to discuss any details of their meeting, but what actually happened was that Hannegan gave McGrath his final assurance that the party will support him for head of the council next year.

Benes Rejoins Czechs To Set Up Government

London, March 11 (AP)—At the end of six years' exile, President Eduard Benes has left England to set up a government in Kosice, second city of Czechoslovakia, it was disclosed today.

He was accompanied by Mrs. Benes and a dozen members of his government and personal staff, and will be joined at Moscow by other cabinet members and Czechoslovak politicians.

Southern Mine Owners Plan To Challenge NLRB in Court

By the Associated Press

Rebuffed by the National Labor Relations Board in trying to stop a nationwide miners' strike vote, Southern coal operators are expected to challenge the board's ruling in the courts.

The operators awaited formal notice from the board that it had rejected their petition before announcing the next step. It was learned authoritatively last night that the board, acting with extraordinary speed, had voted unanimously to deny the petition without hearing.

Under consideration yesterday was a proposal that the other bituminous operators groups—Northern, Western and Illinois—join with the Southern Coal Producers Association in any court action the latter might take. The Southern unit represents about one-third of the industry.

Edward R. Burke, head of the Southern Association, said "we consider it an outrage in this supreme war hour to stop production of coal while 400,000 miners go to the polls and vote on the question of whether they want to tie up all coal production."

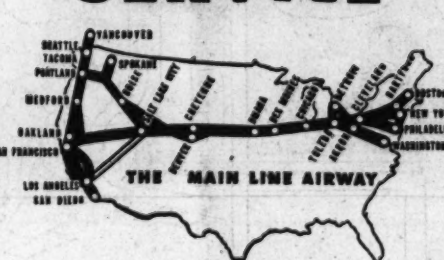

"It ought not to be permitted to happen," Burke, former Nebraska Senator, said. "If there is any way we can stop it we propose to do so." Field Friday by Burke and John C. Gall, the petition provoked the first open controversy of the week-

George W. Knapp Dies; Baltimore Bank Director

Baltimore, March 11 (AP)—Funeral services for George W. Knapp, 66, director of the Citizens Savings Bank in Baltimore and chairman of the Red Cross campaign in Baltimore County, who died Saturday at his home in Catonsville, will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at his residence.

Burial will be in Druid Ridge Cemetery. Mr. Knapp was associated with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., and at the time of his death was foreman of a Federal grand jury.

Buick M-18 Hellcats Score In 21 Days of Steady Action

Mounting evidence that the Buick M-18 Tank Destroyer is the "hottest thing in armored warfare" as recently commented by a member of the 604th Tank Destroyer Battalion, Okla., commands Company B of the 604th Tank Destroyer Battalion. In his outfit there are 12 M-18 Hellcats. His company was recently in continuous action.

LONG AGO we decided something about the American fighting man. Give him good weapons to fight with and he'll do the rest!

That thought guided us in building the big Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines that keep the B-24 boring relentlessly through the skies.

It stood at our elbows as we sat down to design the M-18 76-mm. gun motor carriage.

So it wasn't much of a surprise when stories began coming back about the Hellcat. Stories like the one about the single battalion of 12 M-18's that spent 21 days in continuous action.

Score? Four Tigers, two Mark IV's, four armored vehicles knocked out and hundreds of enemy troops killed, wounded or captured. Two M-18's damaged, neither beyond repair, and only minor injuries to their crews!

Stories like that are legion. They account for words like this, coming straight from the front:

"The vehicle itself is the finest track-laying vehicle in the army. It will outmaneuver any vehicle, go where others won't and has the speed of a wheeled vehicle. "X" company alone has accounted for 25 German tanks, two self-propelled guns and numerous wagons and trucks."

That's what Buick men and Ordnance officers were after when they joined hands to develop the M-18. They gave it hitting power in a high-velocity 76-mm. cannon—traction to go anywhere—speed to outrace any other land vehicle.

And given that much, the boys are doing the job!
